Now is our moment to shine as torch visits area

By Chrissie Daniels
chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

AFTER months of anticipation the Olympic Torch finally arrives in Shepway today.

Huge crowds are expected to line the streets to welcome the iconic flame as it passes through the borough.

The torch is travelling all over the UK before making its way to the Olympic Park on July 27 to mark the start of the London 2012 Olympic Games.

It will be arriving in Hythe at 1.06pm today, Wednesday, starting at London Road before travelling to Prospect Road then leaving for Sandgate via Seabrook Road.

The relay reaches Sandgate at 1.46pm and runs along the Esplanade and High Street. At 2.04pm it makes its way to Folkestone, through to Old High Street before leaving Shepway for Dover at Hill Road.

Thirteen torchbearers will carry the flame through Hythe, in Folkestone there will also be 13 and six through Sandgate.

Speaking when Shepway was announced as being part of the relay route, Cllr Stuart Peall, said: "It is a fantastic honour to be chosen for the route of the Olympic Torch. The eyes of the world will be on Britain for the Games and the torch relay will shine a spotlight on Shepway and its people. I am delighted that we can play a small part in this global sporting event."

ENVIRONMENT

FLASH FLOODS STRIKE

FLOODING was seen in some areas of Shepway over the weekend as heavy rain hit the towns.

No major damage or injuries have been reported, and the water has drained away.

The Environment Agency issued several weather warnings before the weekend, suggesting that areas of the south coast would see a month's worth of rain in just a few hours.

James Humphrys from the Environment Agency said: "Our thoughts are with the communities who have been affected by flooding over the past few weeks and we advise everyone to remain prepared for further heavy rainfall."

Collective Spirit of wooden objects sails into town for visit

A BOAT made entirely of recycled wood, including a piece of Jimi Hendrix's guitar, docked on our coast last week.

Collective Spirit arrived in Folkestone on Tuesday as part of its tour of the south coast, and also made appearances in Dover and Margate.

The boat was designed as part of a project by art duo Lone Twin, and its journey to Kent has been several years in the making after being first thought up at the turn of the century.

The boat consists of 1,221 different wooden objects donated by the public and more than 50 types of wood, including several pieces of Kent history.

Wood was gathered from sites across the country, including stops in Canterbury, Gravesend and Margate earlier this year.

Collective Spirit contains cleats from the Theatre Royal in Margate, scrap wood from the University of Kent and a shred of wood from the original tree from Kent Cricket's St Lawrence Ground boundary in Canterbury.

Co-artistic director Gary Winters said it was a huge thrill to make it to the shores of Shepway.

He said: "It's fantastic. Everyone has been so welcoming and we've really enjoyed returning to the places where we've collected the original wood from.

"It's about supporting what they have given up and not just about what we've achieved."

The project has been funded by Arts Council England as part of the Olympic celebrations.

Torchbearer: I felt on top of the world after my 1948 relay run

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

A TORCHBEARER who carried the Olympic flame in 1948 will have his original aluminium torch firmly in his grip when he watches the 2012 flame tour Kent next week.

Frank Verge, 86, from Ightham, near Sevenoaks, carried the torch for two miles in the run-up to the 1948 London Games as the flame journeyed from Dover to Wembley Stadium.

Mr Verge still remembers vividly the moment he carried the torch through his village and described the feeling as "exhilarating".

He said: "I was very excited. I felt honoured to be able to do it and I felt really good. The evening that I carried the Olympic flame, I felt on top of the world.

"I picked it up at five minutes past four in the morning. Unlike this year, it was a lovely warm night and it was very pleasant.

"We had to go to Maidstone to get the bus and each runner was dropped off at his two mile point.

"There were dozens of people lining the streets, even at four in the morning. The whole village joined in.

"We had just been through the war and that wasn't a very pleasant experience with everyone shooting, bombing and fighting each other, so to see everyone playing games was wonderful and there was a feeling of peace."

Mr Verge had served in the Royal Marines and was an avid runner, which led him to form a sports club with his friends and ultimately gained him the golden ticket to carry the torch.

He said: "After the war, we all came out of the services and formed a sports club in Ightham, but nothing of Olympic standard and we had been going about two years.

HONOURED: Frank Verge, in 1948 and today

"The Olympics were about to be held in Wembley, and there was something in the paper asking clubs to apply to carry the torch.

"We then had to decide who was to run with it, the committee put on an eight-mile run and it happened to be me who hit the tape first."

Mr Verge said he was excited by the return of the Olympic Games to Britain and told the country to embrace the Games spirit.

He added: "There is a lot of controversy about blocked roads but I think I am very pleased about it coming back.

"I think it is wonderful to get together and play games rather than shooting each other."

It is believed that only four of the original torchbearers from 1948 are still alive.

■ Hildenborough's Dame Kelly Holmes will join BBC South East Tonight for a special live Olympic torch programme on Wednesday, July 18, at 7pm, on BBC One, which will feature Mr Verge.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Troops' Games call-up

SOLDIERS from the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders are to be drafted in to bolster Olympic Games security. Only last week the battalion, based at Howe Barracks in Canterbury, was told its numbers were to be slashed and the unit shifted back to Scotland to conduct ceremonial duties. But now they are to be among the 3,500 troops drafted in to help patrol the Games. It follows the failure by security firm G4S to provide the required number of guards.

➔ 2012 tourism campaign

TOURISM chiefs plan to make the most of the Games and hundreds of Olympic and Paralympic banners and flags are being put up at transport hubs and destinations by Visit Kent and Kent County Council. The Look campaign has seen pink Games ribbons placed around Turner Contemporary, and now attention is focused on dressing transport hubs and destination including Ashford, Canterbury, Dover, Folkestone, Maidstone, Margate, Ramsgate, Sevenoaks, and Tonbridge.

➔ Relay traffic warnings

SIGNS highlighting the Olympic Torch Relay route are being put up, warning motorists of disruption to key roads next week. Kent County Council has put up 200 road signs to remind drivers about the route. To keep the way clear for the torchbearers, roads will be closed on a rolling basis so traffic can start moving again as soon as the convoy has passed. It is expected the closures will last no longer than 30 minutes.

TRAVEL

Port eager to avoid a Heathrow fiasco when sports fans to arrive

THE county's ports say they are ready for the influx of Olympic visitors and there will not be a repeat of the long queues seen at Heathrow in the last few weeks.

The Port of Dover said it knows more people will be arriving for the London Games which run from July 27-August 12, and they have prepared staff as well as possible.

Director of operations Robin Dodridge said: "The Port of Dover is working very closely with the Department for Transport, UK Border Agency and other relevant authorities to ensure we are fully prepared to handle the higher volumes of traffic anticipated during the Olympics in addition to our annual holidaymakers.

"Contingency plans are in place to ensure all traffic to the Port of Dover is handled efficiently and safely. Staff will be working round-the-clock to ensure that not only do visitors enjoy a relaxing start to their Olympic experience, but also to maintain business as usual for the UK and Continental freight industry using the port 24-hours-a-day."

P&O Ferries said: "We have six ships operating 23 return sailings a day.

"As people book we will be able to increase staffing levels to cope with extra passengers.

"We do not anticipate any problems and are able to adapt quickly to rising passenger levels. Typically our ships can take up to 2,000 passengers each so we need to keep a close eye on booking numbers.

"It is possible for people to turn up, but we would advise them to book so they are guaranteed a spot on a ship at the time they need."

And a Border Force spokesman added: "We are fully prepared for the busy Olympic period and will be implementing our well-rehearsed plans.

"This includes staffing all immigration desks at key ports whenever necessary during the peak Olympic and Paralympic arrivals period."

Chris Newey, passenger director for the English Channel at DFDS Seaways, said: "We are fully prepared for the Olympics with additional seasonal staff already in place.

"We have also increased our capacity by up to 20 crossings daily with the launch of our Dover-Calais route. This means we now have up to 44 crossings a day between Dover and France.

"We are also planning to introduce a daily coach service from France to London during the Olympic Games."

Could you be the voice of Kent for health and social care?

From April 2013, a new independent organisation for Kent called Local Healthwatch, will provide information about access to health and social care services, gather and pass on the views and experiences of people who use services and potentially provide complaints advocacy.

Volunteers are needed to help get Local Healthwatch started, by being part of an interim shadow board to work out what is needed to make Local Healthwatch a success.

The shadow board will have 12 members and applications are being invited from existing LINK members, voluntary organisations, the community sector and people using, or potentially in need of, health or social care services in Kent.

School places crisis forces young pupils into temporary classrooms

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

HUNDREDS of pupils will be taught in mobile classrooms or school halls in the autumn term due to potential delays in building new primary provision.

It comes amid the crisis surrounding the lack of primary school places, where more than 10,000 extra places will be needed in Kent over the next few years.

An emergency £5.4 million programme is being implemented by Kent County Council to deliver additional provision at 18 schools across the county, through extensions and high-quality mobile classrooms.

But high demand for the September intake, combined with possible building delays, means some schools may have to use existing space, such as halls, until permanent provision is made. Mobile classrooms – some of which will become permanent – will also be used.

Cabinet member for education at KCC Cllr Mike Whiting said the council would be expanding provision at schools rated good or outstanding by Ofsted.

"We are determined as a county council that everyone who needs a place in reception year in September, 2012, will get one and where possible parents shall have one of their three preferences," he said.

"This will be by ensuring relevant classrooms and adequate classroom space is available in September.

"They aren't all temporary; some will be permanent and adaptations of existing buildings."

Deputy cabinet member for education Cllr Gary Cooke stressed the county was "not going back to mobile city" and that provision would be good quality.

But leader of the Labour Group at KCC Cllr Leslie Christie said it was nonsense that a decision over September places was being made so late.

"That cannot be good planning," he said. "Something has led to this, whether it's poor forecasting in the past or whether it's unique numbers that appeared this year."

He also stressed his concern over the impact additional provision

POOR PLANNING: Education chiefs have been accused of failing to plan ahead for the numbers of children needing primary school places could have on neighbouring schools, which could end up with a surplus of places.

But director of education Patrick Leeson said it was important that good quality education was expanded. Commenting on the late decision over provision he said: "This decision is not one we would normally be taking in July.

"In publishing our draft education commissioning plan we will have a more systematic approach to planning ahead and making enough provision for parents to have the school of their choice.

"We can be better at being systematic and planning ahead and our commissioning plan will help us to do that on a more regular basis, but there will always be last-minute decisions about some schools having to expand."

Earlier this year, KCC admitted to needing thousands of additional primary school places and the need to expand schools.

Education chiefs were accused of failing to plan ahead.

In its draft commissioning plan for education, the authority vows to increase places as well as the percentage of parents securing their preferred schools.

'Complex life' of drag queen La Rue revealed in movie

THE tangled love life of drag queen Danny La Rue, who died at his Kent home, is set to be made in to a major movie for the big screen.

La Rue was 81 when he passed away peacefully in his sleep in 2009 at the home he had retired to in Tunbridge Wells. He had been suffering from prostate cancer.

He will forever be known as the man who brought to the masses the once-taboo artistry of dressing as a woman for the sake of entertainment.

Dating back to Shakespearean times when female roles were played by men, it took Danny La Rue to bring drag to a mass modern day audience.

Born Daniel Patrick Carroll, he became a mainstream star, taking his act to the Royal Variety Performance where the drag queen took centre stage in front of the real Queen. He went on to do around 30 shows for the Royals, becoming an OBE in 2002.

But his private life was just as colourful and will be laid bare in a new bio-pic from Leopardrama, the company behind Missing, set in a Dover missing persons unit. It is being funded by the British Film Foundation with a screenplay from Martyn Hesford, who created Fantabulosa, about actor Kenneth Williams.

The La Rue film examines his "complex web of relationships" with his manager and partner Jack Hanson, who died from a stroke in 1974, and also close companion and costume designer Annie Galbraith, who was with him when he died.

In early 2006, La Rue had also suffered a mild stroke and cancelled all performances.

Bob Hope said he was "the most glamorous woman in the world" and Noel Coward, who lived at St Margaret's Bay, called him: "The most professional, the most witty... and the most utterly charming man in the business."

After performing in a woman's wig during a World War Two concert show, his breakthrough was appearing at Winston's Club alongside Barbara Windsor.

He later opened his own London nightclub in 1964, attracting celebrities including Judy Garland, Warren Beatty, Shirley Bassey, Elizabeth Taylor, and royalty in the form of Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon.

Executive producer for Leopardrama Joey Attawia said: "Danny was a groundbreaking entertainer and a vital part of contemporary British popular history, which until now has been overlooked.

"He had a huge cultural and social impact in making the unacceptable acceptable and blazed the trail for the likes of David Bowie and Boy George.

"He broke the mould and we're thrilled to have signed agreements to bring this funny and complex story to life."

CAMPAIGN

'Politicians lack the courage to make a tough decision and it leaves the people of Kent in limbo'

By Marijke Cox
marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE Government has been accused of "dithering" and leaving Kent's people in limbo after the date for the start of its aviation consultation was delayed for a second time.

The news comes after months of uncertainty over when the debate would start – with the Department for Transport refusing to confirm a date, instead only saying it would be "before the summer".

When previously asked if this would mean before parliamentary recess, which begins at the end of July, a DfT spokesman declined to say.

So it came as no shock when this week transport secretary Justine Greening confirmed the consultation over the UK's international connectivity and hub status – including plans for expansion at Heathrow and a Thames estuary airport – would not take place until the autumn.

This followed the publication of the draft policy framework for the future of aviation growth, a document which, although mentioning the use of regional airports, omitted plans for the South East, such as the estuary airport proposal or growth at Heathrow, Gatwick or Stanstead. Instead the DfT said a "separate call for evidence on how to maintain the UK's international connectivity and hub status" would follow later this year.

But this is only once the industry has had time to consider the draft policy framework put forward this week.

Critics say the delay of the consultation, which would allow people a chance to finally have an official say on the Thames estuary plans, was down to David Cameron's fears that it would provoke a Coalition rift.

The Lib Dems are against further airport expansion in the South East and while the Tories say they are opposed to a third runway at Heathrow, some senior Conservatives, reportedly including Chancellor George Osborne, are beginning to warm to the idea.

Options for an estuary airport include 'Boris Island' – London Mayor Boris Johnson's proposal for an airport on reclaimed land off the north Kent coast. Another is from architect Lord Foster, who released plans for an international transport hub on Grain.

But while there are groups both for and against an estuary airport, all are united in wanting the consultation to begin.

Clive Lawrence, campaign director for Demand Regeneration in North Kent (DRINK), said putting off the consultation would ultimately mean a delay in any final decision.

"The decision was meant to be made next spring, but now it won't be until after the next general election," he said. "My shoulders slump at these dithering politicians, where political consideration comes before the needs of this country."

"They don't have the courage to take a tough decision and it means people in north Kent are left in limbo."

"If you campaign and a politician has to make a decision the first thing they will look at is 'will it lose me votes?', which has nothing to do with the long-term interests of the country."

"Proper leadership is when they don't ignore what people feel."

"Politicians need to look at the airport plan; we need a resolution."

Joan Darwell, a campaigner from anti-airport group Friends of the North Kent Marshes, said it was a waiting game.

"It's one delay after another, it's just simmering," she said. "We want to ignite passion in people to make them respond to the upcoming consultation, but it's difficult when it keeps getting delayed."

"We need people to respond, we need the Government to get over the idea that the north Kent marshes is a place to build an airport."

"This consultation is a waiting game, I hope it's in autumn but you just don't know."

Medway Council said while it welcomed the recent aviation document into the importance of existing regional airports, it was looking forward to autumn's consultation: "We won't hesitate in putting forward our case and making it clear why this idea should never get off the ground."

ART

Artist putting his heart and 'sole' into memorial for fallen WWI heroes

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE charitable people of Kent have put their best foot forward to come up with 800 pairs of shoes for an unusual new work of art to remember those who fell in World War One.

Artist Vivian Pedley said he needs to reach at least 2,500 pairs of shoes, and he doesn't mind what condition they are in.

He plans to use the shoes to line a pathway to the Tongswood war memorial that was put up in Hawkhurst just after World War One.

Mr Pedley, from Cornwall, was struck by the beauty of the memorial.

The exhibition circles around a war memorial in the grounds of the Tongswood Estate – now St Ronan's School in Hawkhurst. The owners of the estate, Charles Gunther and his wife built the memorial after the Great War and the 14 men named on it worked on the estate, or were associated with it. They include two of Charles' sons, Charles and Norman.

The artist said the poignant exhibition of sculptures will express the futures, hopes and dreams stolen by war.

His installation develops as you walk closer to the memorial site.

It opens with a sculpture trail incorporating the war poetry of Wilfred Owen which in turn leads to a walk of shoes, called We Could Have Walked with You.

He said: "This is a representation of the friends and descendants that these men never lived to have. These friends and descendants would have been the people of Kent. Therefore we are calling upon members of the community to bring forward as many old shoes as they can to make this major piece of work as intimate as possible.

"This is going to be a spectacular piece, but I need to reach a target of some 5,000 shoes, but in truth I would love to far exceed this.

"The bigger the number of shoes, the bigger the statement this work will make.

"I don't mind if they are men's, women's or children's shoes. They can be in any condition, dirty or broken, ones on their own or in pairs.

"I will accept anything, so dig out the old ballet shoes, smelly trainers, and even ski boots. I need them all, and have even got some used for golf and a flipper.

"I am delighted by the huge response we have had already, but the enormity of the statement I wish to make would be underlined by the greatest number of shoes, so I need many, many more."

Emma Davies, 39, co-owns the Walled Nursery, part of the estate, with her husband Monty.

She said: "There is so much history to our estate and the war memorial is quite often not noticed.

"We strongly feel that the 14 men from the estate who lost their lives in World War One – and those who have died in all wars since – should not be forgotten.

"The bulk of the exhibition is contained within the walls of our nursery which is a rare surviving example of a Victorian walled kitchen garden."

■ Anyone with shoes they wish to donate for the artwork, can drop them off at The Walled Nursery, Water Lane, Hawkhurst, TN18 5DH, or at the Old Haberdashery, 33a High Street, Ticehurst TN5 7AS.

No time to Lounge as festival chiefs start planning for 2013

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

ORGANISERS of the Lounge on the Farm festival say work is already under way for next year after declaring last weekend's event a success.

The three-day festival at Merton Farm in Canterbury had been under threat after a rise in the number of crimes and concerns over under-age drinking last year.

But tighter security and a big cut in the number of youth tickets appears to have solved the issue, with just five arrests – four for drug offences.

With improved parking arrangements outside the venue, to prevent parking in the busy Nackington Road, festival chiefs also seemed to solve complaints from residents.

Founder Sean Baker said: "We're pleased with how the weekend went and proud that Lounge on the Farm has had a successful seventh year."

"We saw some brilliant performances from Emeli Sande, Dexys, The Charlatans, The Wombats, Example and DJ Wire. Chic getting everyone on stage for their last song was a definite highlight of the festival."

"Not to mention Stefan Gates asking everyone to sit on sand-wiches in the Kitchen Theatre, and Fionn Regan closing the Farm Folk stage on Sunday and dancing the night away in Lounge Originals. We can't wait to get started on 2013."

Some 7,500 music lovers passed through the gates over the course of the weekend at the 10,000 capacity event, with many apparently put off by the inclement weather.

Festival organisers also confirmed they "tried everything" to accommodate Charlotte Church – the classical singer turned popstar – but "clashing commitments" forced her to cancel a low-key show at the event on the Sunday, despite her pleading to be put on the bill in the first place.

In total there were four arrests for drug offences and one following an assault "between people known to each other".

A 30-year-old man from Aylesham is also currently in custody after a security guard was injured as a car left the festival on Sunday night.

Chief Insp Steve Barlow said: "Kent Police has worked closely with the new event management company and its security contractors who have been co-operative throughout the preparation and planning of the event and during the actual festival."

"The result has been a safer festival for all to enjoy."

Campaigners' fury at demands for Green Belt land to be released for housing developments

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

PROPERTY experts are calling on the Government to release precious Green Belt land to allow for new affordable housing.

They are also demanding councils be named and shamed for failing to hit housing targets set out in local plans, in a bid to ensure house building continues.

It follows the release of figures in the annual Housing the Nation report which revealed the South East will miss out on almost 10,000 homes from previously set targets.

Under the Labour government, house building targets were set out under the South East Plan, with 654,000 expected in the region by 2026.

But this was scrapped by the Coalition and control handed to district and borough councils to decide on housing numbers.

It prompted three to reduce their targets and several others to consider lowering numbers.

Gravesham council reduced its figures from around 9,000 to 4,600.

Now property experts have warned of the impact on the housing market and the lack of places for people to live.

Tim Cann, head of residential at BNP Paribas Real Estate – one of the organisations behind the Housing the Nation report – said with 200,000 households on council waiting lists across the South East, new homes were crucial.

"Effective changes need to be made in order to accommodate those still waiting for affordable housing," he said.

"In order to keep the housing market alive, the Government needs to introduce swift changes which will ensure that current housing targets are not only met, but that they are not further reduced."

The report recommended releasing Green Belt land, publicising housing league tables on local authorities, and better engagement on the issue with communities.

It also called for the creation of a special “development projects team” within the Government to “prevent major schemes being stalled by burdensome local demands”.

But campaigners criticised the recommendations and stressed that the new National Planning Policy Framework, published earlier this year, made it clear brownfield land should be developed first and the Green Belt should be protected by the authorities.

A spokesman from Protect Kent, the county's branch of Campaign to Protect Rural England, said: "Whilst the consultants who produced this report are factually correct in that those targets will be missed, they are historic targets the Government has chosen to scrap."

“They have decided that we should move to a new era of localism which will guide house-building.

“The reason the targets have not been met is because local authorities get to decide their own housing numbers according to local needs.

"We believe the idea put forward to release Green Belt land is disgraceful.

"We feel that in order to improve the housing situation, projects such as the No Use Empty' one in which buildings are brought back to market are far more effective at combating a housing shortage.

“We must also remember that there is land available if developers want to build houses.

"In fact, CPRE commissioned a report which found that even in the South East where housing demand is at its highest, land supply outpaced demand with one quarter of suitable brownfield plots going unused."

Tuition fee increase sees a big drop in uni applications

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

APPLICATIONS to Kent's universities have plummeted, with almost 10,000 fewer students applying for a place this year.

It follows the Government's controversial decision to allow universities to triple tuition fees from autumn 2012.

All four of the county's universities chose to do so, with the University of Kent in Canterbury, and University for the Creative Arts (UCA), which has campuses in Rochester, Canterbury and Maidstone, charging the maximum £9,000 a year.

Figures from university admissions body UCAS show a huge 29.2 per cent reduction in applications at UCA this year, a drop from 9,664 in 2011 to 6,842 in 2012.

A UCA spokesman said the university had been affected by the "disproportionate 16.9 per cent drop" in applications that all arts institutions have suffered.

This is believed to be down to the perceived lack of a stable income in the creative arts industry combined with fears of leaving university with huge debt.

The spokesman stressed UCA had also seen a 13 per cent decrease due to courses that had been discontinued.

He added: "This year, despite the decrease in applications, we still have three times the number of students applying for the 1,879 undergraduate places that we can offer and will be entering clearing to ensure all places are filled."

The University of Kent has seen a 7.4 per cent drop in applications, from 28,019 to 25,934.

Canterbury Christ Church University, a leading teacher training institution due to introduce charges of £8,500 a year, saw a 5.1 per cent drop of 887 applications. And the University of Greenwich, which has a campus in Medway and will charge £8,300, had a huge 11.6 per cent drop, amounting to 4,124 fewer applications.

But despite the major slump, UCAS said there would still be an excess of applications for available places, although "less exaggerated" than in the last two years.

UCAS chief executive Mary Curnock Cook said: "Although there has been a reduction in application rates where tuition fees have increased, there has not been a disproportionate effect on more disadvantaged groups."

She said, however, that application rates for older applicants had declined by around 15-20 per cent.

She added: "We also find no evidence of an increase in plans to study while living at home, or any significant shift towards courses with higher starting salaries on graduation."

Chief executive of Universities UK Nicola Dandridge said the fall in applications was far less dramatic than some were predicting.

But she added that as the admissions stage approaches later this summer, she would look in more detail at whether the new system has had an impact on certain groups and specific subjects.

POLITICS

Lords could become a 'dumping ground' for failed party candidates

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

ONE of Kent's newest MPs has condemned plans to reform the House of Lords, warning it will create a "dumping ground" for party candidates who failed to get elected to the Commons.

Dartford MP Gareth Johnson was among 91 Conservative MPs to rebel against the proposals in what turned out to be the biggest revolt against the Coalition since it came into power.

Three other Kent parliamentarians joined Mr Johnson in his rebellion during Tuesday's vote: Chatham and Aylesford MP Tracey Crouch, MP for Canterbury Julian Brazier, and Gravesend MP Adam Holloway.

Despite Tory unrest, the Coalition still won the vote on the principle of the planned reforms, which aim to introduce a mainly elected House of Lords.

It was described as a triumph by Liberal Democrat leader Nick Clegg, even though the Government opted to abandon the 'programme motion' vote which would have sped up the passage of the bill.

But Mr Johnson made an impassioned plea not to abolish the current system, and replace it with candidates who will be elected for 15 years.

"I have never defied the party line before, but the bill is fundamentally wrong," he said.

"Seven hundred years of history will be undone if we support this. I want to be able to look my children in the eye and say, 'I did not forsake the British constitution. I said no'.

"We need to be brave enough to say that the Lords works. It is not perfect, but it works.

"These proposals will ensure the Lords operates in a party political manner. Legislation will be blocked or supported for purely party political reasons, rather than simply because the Lords believe the legislation is wrong."

He said under the changes the Lords would end up as a "dumping ground" for failed party candidates.

"The wealth of expertise that exists in the Lords will go, to be replaced by people who really wanted to be members of the Commons."

But other Tories in Kent backed their party despite concerns the Lib Dems were forcing the Conservatives to back the bill by threatening "consequences" such as withdrawing support for boundary changes.

MP for Thanet South Laura Sandys said: "Restoring power to the people is at the heart of Conservatism."

"We have an unprecedented opportunity to instil democracy at the heart of our Parliament."

"In this Parliament we have already introduced legislation for elected police commissioners and have promoted city mayors. Reform is an essential component of strengthening Parliament in the face of a stronger executive."

"With greater resources and more activism in the House of Lords, both chambers will have an increased capacity to hold Government to account."

HOLIDAYS

Travel agents profit as rain drives sunseekers abroad

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

TRAVEL agents are seeing a boom in sales as people plan their escape from the miserable weather and head for the sun.

The weeks of rain have left families desperate to holiday abroad, much to the delight of travel operators in Kent.

The surge marks a dent in the staycation trend, as people shun UK breaks and splash out on foreign getaways, despite the state of the economy leaving them with smaller budgets.

Baldwins Travel Agency, which has offices in Tunbridge Wells, Maidstone, Sevenoaks, Tonbridge and Uckfield, has seen bookings abroad increase.

Business development director Nick Marks said: "Our Maidstone office is doing very well, with a triple digit percentage increase year-on-year."

"Across all our branches we have seen an increase. Late bookings will be big this year."

"We must be the only industry hoping for more rain."

ON HOLIDAY: Chasing the sun

The problems in Greece and Egypt haven't affected tourism, with the agency receiving the same amount of bookings as last year, whereas Turkey has gained in popularity.

But the situation isn't the same across all travel agents. When we spoke to Go Travel last week they only had one booking across five offices for the entire day.

A spokeswoman said: "People have very low budgets. It is a concern, but it is so up and down – we could get a rush of bookings next week."

Tony Clish, director of Park Holidays UK, said his six Kent coastal parks are "substantially up" on summer figures compared with this time last year.

He said: "I can't blame travel agents for trying to talk the market up, but the reality is that people don't make holiday decisions on the basis of whether the sky happens to be blue."

"The staycation trend is, I think, now firmly embedded – as our booking figures demonstrate. It's also interesting that we are now seeing record numbers of buyers of holiday homes on our parks."

"It's especially significant because it shows people are making a long-term commitment to holidays in Britain, which is good news for the small businesses that depend on tourism spending to survive."

Victoria Bacon, Association British Travel Agents, head of communication, said: "The UK is a beautiful country with exceptional holiday appeal, but the weather has been setting records for all the wrong reasons and it is no surprise that millions are looking to head off overseas for more reliable weather and temperatures."

County Show highlights Garden of England's role in economic recovery

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

AGRICULTURE will be key to the economic recovery, according to a government minister who was guest of honour at the Kent County Show.

Secretary of State for the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Caroline Spelman said she chose to come to the show because of family links and the fact she had lived at both Saltwood and Knockholt, near Sevenoaks.

She said: "The agricultural sector is an extremely important part of economic recovery and growth. There is an increasing demand for food and we starting to export more."

"So it is an important industry."

"Kent has the potential to be an extremely important part of the whole economy of the UK and shows such as this are an inspiration, especially to young people, as they show how important agriculture really is."

Miss Spelman donned wellington boots for a trip around the show where she said she intended to watch showjumping and speak to as many people as possible.

She also emphasised the high quality of the produce: "Kent has a great reputation when it comes to food and I've already seen some lovely cherries."

"Events like this give people the opportunity to see the very best of what Kent has to offer."

"It is also important to show the opportunities which exist for jobs in the rural sector as well as economic growth."

"Ministers each try and attend a county show and I really wanted to come to Kent. My grandparents lived in Hythe and I spent all of my holidays there when I was young down there."

"I loved the shingle beach and the Romney Hythe and Dymchurch Railway."

"Then I came to live at Saltwood and raised my family in Knockholt so it's great to be back in Kent and see the very best the county has to offer."

On Friday there were fears the weather could scupper the annual Kent County Show, organised by the Kent County Agricultural Society, with the event was due to run until Sunday.

Overnight rain created muddy conditions underfoot on Friday and forced the car parks to close in the morning for public safety, with admissions restricted to pedestrians only.

The County Showground in Detling, just outside Maidstone, is the setting for a celebration of all that is best about rural life in Garden of England.

Livestock and produce are always at the heart of an event which has steadily grown in popularity, now attracting more than 80,000 visitors.

The equine and livestock judging attracts entrants and spectators from across the UK, but the event is more than just a celebration of the diversity and excellence of rural industry, according to George Jessel, chairman of the society.

He said: "We are really putting Kent on the map with this show."

Mr Jessel explained the event is a major way of showing how rural industry and farming continues to be an important part of the country's economy.

He said: "It has great value to young people. It shows that there are jobs and opportunities available in rural businesses. It's part of education – showing what the countryside can offer."

"In the past county shows started as a way for farmers to exhibit their livestock and produce but have moved way beyond that and now almost every sector is represented."

"It is also fantastic for networking. If you are a farmer, as I am, you can see the very latest developments in technology as well as find people who work in a particular specialist industry whose services you will need in the future."

The Food Tent and Produced In Kent marquees offered cakes, breads, cheeses, meats, seafood, home-made pies, jams and chutneys, chocolates and fudge, sausages, and Kent-produced crisps and ice-cream.

Drink was equally varied with fruit juices, beers, ciders, ginger beers, teas, coffees, and flavoured vodkas available.

Why Farming Matters In Kent, is an area of the show offering information about local produce, careers and training in agriculture. Visitors will also be able to see sheep-shearing demonstrations and cattle, horses and goats.

And the event also tackled serious issues; the RSPB's stand had a large banner protesting about the planned estuary airport.

Kent Young Farmers showed off a variety of livestock, such as cattle, sheep, pigs, rabbits, and poultry.

The Flower Tent is renowned for the horticultural exhibitors who demonstrate their expert growing and nurturing skills, with displays of roses, fuchsias, cacti, carnivorous plants, shrubs, and ferns.

The show's EcoVillage explains how to live a greener life, covering everything from renewable energy and cars to skin care and garden furniture.

A woodland area offers a tranquil setting where visitors can learn about rural crafts and skills, kept alive by experts keen to share their knowledge, while a visit to the Kent Beekeepers' tent offers an insight into one of the animal kingdom's busiest creatures.

EXHIBITION

Art show is a family affair for Bagpuss creator Firmin

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

BAGPUSS creator Peter Firmin and his artist daughters are staging a two-month exhibition of their work in Whitstable.

Firmin, who also was behind childrens' favourites Ivor the Engine and The Clangers is currently sailing on tall ships.

The 83-year-old and his collaborator Oliver Postgate founded Smallfilms, with Postgate writing and narrating and Firmin designing, building puppets and animating, at a farmhouse in Blean, near Canterbury, which is still his family home.

Daughter Emily, who appeared in the opening sequence of Bagpuss, said: "We are all artists and this is what we do."

The show is called Off the Wall because people can go along to the Horsebridge Arts and Community Centre in Whitstable and buy the works straight off the wall.

It is billed as a unique and fantastic opportunity to see the

GENIUS: Peter Firmin and his daughters are exhibiting in Whitstable artwork of this cherished TV artist and his family.

Emily Firmin and her partner Justin Mitchell are showing their papier-mâché artworks.

And there is also work from the other daughters Hannah – known for her book jacket illustrations for Alexander McCall Smith's The No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency Series – and Charlotte and Josie Firmin.

Emily said: "I create work with my Justin. We make art, and, of course, art is to be seen. "It is nice to have an exhibition in a local gallery.

"Whitstable is great because we live here. Charlotte is in Faversham and Josie has a shop in Canterbury and London. We all grew up in Blean."

The show runs until the end of August. The gallery is open 9am-6pm daily, and 10am-6pm on Sunday.

Hosepipe ban dropped, but we still need to save water

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

EVEN though the hosepipe ban has been lifted and there should be enough supplies for the rest of year, people are being urged to still think twice before turning on the tap.

At the start of the week, Kent's water companies – South East Water, Sutton and East Surrey Water, and Veolia Water Southeast – lifted restrictions imposed in April after two exceptionally dry winters.

A South East Water spokesman warned: "We could all be back to square one if we have yet another dry winter. We are confident we have water resources that will cover the rest of the year."

"We advise all our customers to still be sensible with water use. There has been a drop in demand during the rains, but demand needs to be down all the time."

"There are plenty of sensible things people can do like taking shorter showers, turning the tap off when brushing teeth, using full loads in the dishwasher and washing machines. We need to keep the water we have got and make it last."

Southern Water, which along with Thames Water had already lifted restrictions, said its reservoirs are in a healthy position with Bewl at 90 per cent.

But some underground sources are still below average.

Water quality and strategy manager Meyrick Gough said: "Although our water restrictions are no longer in place, underground sources are still being replenished and we'd like to remind customers to think about the water they use."

"We're entering the summer period when demand peaks, so we should all continue to use water wisely where we can."

And Veolia Southeast said while the unprecedented rainfall since April has led to a significant improvement in water resources, the company is anticipating rain starting from as early as October.

Mike Pocock, water resources manager said: "We take most of our water from aquifers."

"Although the exceptional levels of recent rainfall have resulted in an unusually high top-up of groundwater for this time of year, the critical period for recharging our aquifers is between October and March, when less rainfall is lost to plant growth, evaporation and run off to rivers."

"It must be stressed that groundwater levels still remain lower than normal, so we are asking our customers to continue to use water wisely."

He added: "A third dry autumn and winter would make a hosepipe ban next year a definite possibility."

Hollywood legend's charity to fund hospice care study

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A FOUNDATION run in the name of Hollywood legend Paul Newman is helping fund medical research in Kent.

It's called the Newman's Own Foundation and is financed from sales of the star's world famous foods, including his salad dressings. It has donated more than £230 million to thousands of charities around the world so far.

Now Pilgrims Hospices has been granted £6,500 to fund research that will help people affected by terminal lung disease.

They said the star's charity recognises the importance of its Kent-based research into ensuring people with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), receive the same consistent high quality of care as other patients.

Oscar-winner Newman (pictured) was a movie icon for his roles in films like Cool Hand Luke, The Hustler, and Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. He died in 2008.

Dr Declan Cawley is pioneering a model of care that will significantly improve the services available to people with COPD.

This is a debilitating illness with a range of acute symptoms such as breathlessness, pain, fatigue, reduced mobility, depression and anxiety.

He said: "This development has the potential to improve the quality of life for people living with COPD as well as provide meaningful support for carers."

"If the proposed COPD model of care gains the approval of patients and carers then it has the potential to be adopted throughout the UK and beyond."

The funding was won thanks to the work of James Acton, director of The Brand Nursery.

He connected Pilgrims Hospices to the Newman foundation, and said: "My father received his end-of-life care at Pilgrims Hospices and we just wanted to try to do something meaningful and valuable for the charity."

"We work with Newman's Own in the UK and the US and we were delighted to introduce Pilgrims to funding that may have otherwise been difficult to find. It's also what my father would have done to say a big thank you."

Pilgrims Hospices has units in Canterbury, Ashford and Westgate-on-Sea.

Requiring funds of £9m a year, the hospices provide palliative care for adults with a range of illnesses that cannot be cured including cancer, heart failure, respiratory conditions and neurological diseases, and was founded in 1982.

Anyone wanting to help support Dr Cawley's work can phone Yvonne on 01843 233922.

DARTFORD is bucking the unemployment trend, with the area seeing a drop in the number of jobless people, while some parts of Kent suffer rises of almost 20 per cent.

According to figures for June, Dartford has seen a 2.4 per cent drop in those seeking jobseekers allowance compared to this time last year, while Dover saw a staggering 18.9 per cent rise in claimants of JSA, the biggest increase in the county, followed by Sittingbourne, with a 16.8 per cent rise.

The town's Tory MP Gareth Johnson said: "Dartford's employment situation has managed to buck the trend due to a number of enterprising innovations in the town centre.

"Jobseekers have also benefited from the new Glow events centre and Plaza at Bluewater shopping centre. We must never become complacent, but it is heartening that unemployment in Dartford has fallen."

More than 600 of Johnson's constituents have found employment in the last two years, and there are hopes the boost will stimulate further growth.

He added: "Recruitment partnerships such as the one run by Bluewater and North West Kent College have helped ensure young people gain the skills employers are looking for. This is a valuable investment in the future of the town."

Dartford council leader Cllr Jeremy Kite said he was hopeful the area could act as a springboard for the rest of the county's economy.

Cllr Kite said: "We have had our fair share in retail shops closing. However, we have more small businesses, and large ones too, which makes us attractive for investment. We tend to be the first area of Kent to show a boost in the economy, so I hope this is the case."

Despite the year-on-year decrease in JSA claimants, Dartford has seen an 109 per cent increase in registered unemployment in the last five years.

Discover architectural gems of 'unique' county

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

The Pevsner series of Buildings of England books have been the cornerstone for research into this country's architecture.

Churches, public buildings, castles and random structures such as follies, schoolhouses, toll booths and railway viaducts, all came under the scrutiny of expert historian Nikolaus Pevsner, starting in the 1950s.

While researching the highways and byways of England the writer liked to be driven and usually that job fell to his wife.

But on trips to Berkshire and Hampshire, John Newman, from Tonbridge, took the wheel.

As a thank you he was given the job of compiling the companion guide to his home county – which has just been fully revised and reprinted. The updated edition is in the shops now from Yale University Press.

The classic architectural survey Kent: West and the Weald has been used by students and travellers for more than 40 years.

Now fully revised and expanded to include the great variety of buildings added to the landscape during that time, this indispensable guide offers fresh perspectives on major landmarks such as Igham Mote, Sissinghurst, and Hever Castle.

Major themes are explored and specialist chapters from individual contributors add to the scope. Features such as church vaults, elaborate staircases and spectacularly decorated salons are also examined for their significance in design and decoration.

Kent is home to an extraordinary amount of first-rate architecture, from the timber-framed houses of the Weald and the cathedral of Rochester to the planned, modernist suburb of New Ash Green.

"Pevsner actually wrote 46 volumes in his series over 25 years," said Mr Newman.

"But he was not so keen on the Home Counties, so he let me have a go at Kent.

"He liked the countryside, not so much the big, imposing, architecture of large homes which are frequently shielded by rhododendrons. He liked a clear view of a building and although he was interested in late 19th century and early 20th century architecture he wasn't so keen on the logistical problems of finding out about them."

Mr Newman is writing a companion volume to his work covering north east and east Kent which will be available from November next year.

"Kent is unique in having two Medieval cathedrals – Rochester and Canterbury. So in writing the books I have featured Rochester in this volume and Canterbury in the other.

"Rochester may be less impressive, but it still has an enormous amount of splendour.

"Pevsner may have had a dislike of the influence of London and people who made their money and then bought country estates close to the capital, but Kent has a very good example of this in the form of Penshurst Place, built in the 1930s and very well preserved.

"Then there is the influence of the Archbishop of Canterbury who first built Knole Place."

The new edition of the book features detailed explorations of urban areas and fresh insights into popular visitor attractions, such as Igham Mote and Hever Castle.

Smaller houses, war memorials and other local landmarks are also featured as Mr Newman, a lifelong resident of the county as well as a professional architectural historian, explored every parish in the county, using published sources and archives as well as the testimony of librarians, churchwardens, homeowners, building custodians, and teachers.

Contemporary architecture is also explored.

"The church at West Malling is very impressive," said Mr Newman. "And the new addition to Maidstone Museum is almost tongue-in-cheek, a gift wrapped parcel of a building which is extremely eye-catching."

OPINION

A new app-roach to health care

Dr Peter Green explains how the NHS is trialling new technologies to put patients in the driving seat of managing their care, and how you can help...

'SKYPING' your GP, tracking and monitoring your blood pressure on an app or taking part in a teleconference with your healthcare team and a specialist consultant in America.

It may sound futuristic, but it's time for us to work smarter in using today's technology to make the NHS better for you.

These are just some of the cutting-edge examples we are exploring to better support and treat patients – particularly those with long-term conditions like diabetes and heart disease – around the clock.

Kent has already been at the forefront of research and use of technology in supporting patients in the community.

We were one of the pilot sites for Telehealth and Telecare.

Telehealth uses electronic equipment to monitor a patient's daily health, like their pulse, blood pressure and sugar levels, from their home before sending it to a community matron or specialist nurse.

Being able to track a patient's condition so closely not only empowers them to manage their own condition, but prevents crises and resulted in fewer emergency admissions to hospital. The Department of Health is so impressed it is now championing its use nationwide.

But we know this is just the tip of the iceberg. There is a plethora of emerging technologies that can be adopted to improve people's experience of the NHS, both for patients and clinicians. Apps have already been developed by Diabetes UK and Asthma UK to help patients in the early stages of these disease record medical information and share it with their community nurses.

Seven GP practices in east Kent are piloting the Met Office COPD Health Outlook Service with patients who have the lung condition chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, which can be aggravated by the weather. Patients get a recorded voice call when poor conditions are forecast, giving them the opportunity to take action to stay well.

We are also looking at developing IT solutions to enable health and social care teams to share information more easily.

This work is being driven by the Kent and Medway Technology Programme, which brings together clinical commissioning groups, local government, clinicians, universities, research partners and patients and the public in the search for these new technologies and how they can be used and applied to help patients.

It will involve working with a range of organisations and using smartphones, apps and the internet more widely to improve care.

One thing is for sure, if the NHS locally is to embrace the challenges of the 21st century,

We are looking at IT solutions to enable care teams to share info more easily we must now embrace the opportunities technologies bring.

Three of the best health apps are: the Diabetes UK app gives people reminders on checking blood sugar levels and taking medication – information can then be sent electronically to the patient's surgery or clinic. www.diabetes.org.uk; the iBreastCheck from Breakthrough Breast Cancer, provides women (and men too) with a guide to checking their breasts for abnormalities. www.ibreastcheck.com; the NHS Drink Tracker helps you follow how much you drink over time, analysing your habits to provide tailored feedback. www.nhs.uk/tools.

Got an idea you think would help? Then register your interest in joining the Technology Patient Group. Email technology.kentandmedway@nhs.net or call 01227 791163.

At last it's time to get into the Olympic spirit

YOU don't get much for free these days, so to be able to witness a once-in-a-lifetime spectacle in the form of the Olympic Torch Relay for nothing is special opportunity.

It also gives those who missed out on Games tickets the chance to soak up some Olympic spirit and feel part of London 2012.

We're also lucky enough to have the torch here longer than any other county, and with two stopover nights to enjoy it creates the sense we're considered an important county in the Olympic and Paralympic build up.

So join the crowds next week and soak up some Olympic atmosphere.

After all, this is likely to be a one-off chance for most of us.

We need a resolution

IT CAME as no surprise when the Government announced there would be a delay on the aviation debate.

People are fed up with politicians failing to show some guts by pushing ahead with a decision. Either way, a resolution needs to be found to stop people having to live their lives in limbo.

Memorial is well deserved

EXCELLENT that Bomber Command is being recognised.

Among the Command's crew were a number of West Indians, admitted to the RAF once the colour bar was lifted in 1940. For example, Ivo De Souza of Jamaica became a Flight Commander. Larry Osborne of Trinidad became a Group Captain; Flight Lieutenant Ed Scobie went on to become the Mayor of Roseau (capital of Dominica) and subsequently taught at Princeton and Rutgers universities. Flight Lieutenant Cy Grant from Guyana was shot down but survived as a PoW. Flying Officer Errol Barrow of Barbados led his country into independence and became its first Prime Minister in 1966.

Tax cash bid is just naivety

YOUR article about Kent County Council expecting monies from a foreign lorry tax (which under EU law would probably mean British hauliers too), from the Treasury, shows a certain degree of political naivety.

The only outcome of such legislation could be repercussions for British hauliers by other European nations and costs passed onto the end user.

Congestion charging and parking seems to average that two thirds of the money collected goes on administration and I guess this would be the norm here.

If any money was received, would it really be spent on road improvements? Driving time restrictions have been around for nearly 50 years and despite hundreds of billions of pounds collected in tax over that period, neither Labour nor Conservative governments have tackled the problem of truck parking. They have made the rules and made sure they are enforced, but lacked the leadership to solve the problems created.

Terry Hudson, Herne Bay

Horse needs a good clean up

RE: The White Horse at Folkestone. It would be good if it could be cleaned before the Olympics, to be a welcoming symbol of Kent to people using the Channel Tunnel. It's very dull at the moment.

Jean Coulter, by email

The estuary is not an option

MY views for a hub airport as proposed, are summed up by Marijke Cox in last week's paper. Too costly, not wanted by a huge array of people including some in the industry, and would devastate an area of global environmental importance.

We are great at travelling all over the world 'educating' people about how to care for their environments, yet in our own tiddly little island all we can think about is airports, industry, roads et al, that supposedly bring employment. Yet there have been millions unemployed in this country for most of my 50 years of working life, and there have been too few schools, hospitals, or houses, and too many cars for the roads to cope with also for as long, or longer, despite constant shifting of the green belt and continuous building of roads, houses, etc.

This is necessary, but sacrifice something irreplaceable for consumer demand and you gain nothing long term.

I protested about the hub when it was originally going to be built at Cliffe, and I live in Gravesend, so I'm not a Nimby. Even Australia supported that protest, and the same arguments apply here.

As Joan Darwell said, it's not about houses, it's about health and well-being, and if people in power like Boris Johnson can't see that, then there is no hope for humanity. Because if we can't set a good example by looking after our own ecology, then why should the Brazilians look after the rainforest? Or farmers in Africa protect ivory horned animals from poachers, etc?

If we need more space for planes then there has to be a better way of providing for it. Go back to the drawing board and think again, because the estuary is not an option.

Julian Burrows, Gravesend

Reuse an old airport instead

I have heard all the fuss and bother about Boris Island in the Thames Estuary, and the arguments for and against.

However, there is a solution that everyone seems to have overlooked. Governments are very keen and big on new developments that provide large contracts for those in the know with high-up connections. This one is no different.

There are plenty of former World War Two bomber airfields dotted around the country in areas that would not bother too many residents if one of them were to be used again, as a central hub for the UK. As the current lot are very big on high-speed trains, an additional project could run alongside the recommissioning of an abandoned airfield as stated, to provide the necessary transport linkage to the capital and beyond.

Problem solved, all done on dry land. Simple.

Geoff Parr, by email

Develop Lydd or Manston

I say no to the idea of an estuary airport.

It is a busy shipping lane, would cause goodness knows what upheaval to the community of Grain, in particular the Hoo Peninsula.

What of the wartime wreck of the Richard Montgomery? Perched on a sand bar, still loaded with munitions from the Second World War.

Experts say there is no danger, but there is no man-made disturbance yet.

I am at a loss as to why Manston or Lydd are not strongly in the frame. Both were in the past the sites of successful commercial airlines.

Manston has a huge runway (emergency landing facility) a massive land area, and cargo flies out on a regular basis. Not forgetting Kent International Airport on site. Lydd is a lovely historic airport already seeking permission to extend its runway.

The main problems, not forgetting noise (aircraft are pretty quiet nowadays), and birdlife which resites itself or endures, is the location. Both are a bit 'out of the way' of mainstream traffic. In the case of the Ramsgate line.

I suppose it's money. If there is money considered for the Estuary Mistake, use it to develop Manston or Lydd.

Government's not after your money – for now

Q I WANTED to invest £1,000 in index-linked National Savings certificates, but according to the Post Office they are no longer sold there.

How do I apply now?

A NATIONAL Savings currently has no savings certificates on sale at all, whether index linked or fixed interest.

It also has no growth bonds, income bonds or equity bonds, and it has stopped accepting savings into its easy-access account and its investment account.

National Savings is a government agency, so when you put your money into one of its products, you are really lending your money to the Government – and, right now, the Government does not want to borrow from you so it has shut down all these schemes, at least for the moment.

Q My father passed away recently, aged 87. While in his 50s, he took out a policy with Norwich Union to cover funeral costs.

However, he paid far more in premiums than was paid out on his policy. My mother has a similar policy, and Aviva informed her that if she stopped paying premiums then the company would effectively take several hundred more pounds from her.

A Your father paid about £2,600 in premiums, and on his death Aviva, the company behind Norwich Union, paid benefits of £1,696.

Your mother has paid the same premiums and she has been told her policy will pay £1,437, though if she cancels future premiums this will drop to £1,200 – presumably because she will lose any final bonus.

It is easy to see why you think this is unfair. So-called funeral policies like these offer poor value for money. On the other hand, they have never been savings policies.

To be blunt, they are no more than a gamble. A certain percentage of people will die comparatively young, before their premiums match the benefits the insurer must pay.

Your long-lived parents' premiums have paid for the benefits to other families where the policyholder has died early. This is how all insurance works, and as long as the policy terms were spelled out properly in the beginning, Aviva has done nothing wrong.

Q I INVESTED over many years in premium bonds until I reached the maximum £15,000 allowed. I used to get a £50 prize almost every month. Now, though, I go months without a win, and I never get more than £25.

TONY HETHERINGTON
MONEY CLINIC

Is it true new bonds stand a better chance than old bonds? Should I cash mine in and reinvest to get new numbers?

A OLD bonds with low numbers stand exactly the same chance of a prize as new bonds with high numbers.

The reason you see recently issued bonds so often in the prize lists is that there are more of them in circulation.

Ernie – the electronic machine that generates the winning numbers – cannot tell the difference between old and new bonds, and prints out numbers completely at random.

The reason you are winning fewer prizes is simply that the Government has reduced the prize fund in line with low interest rates, and there are now far more £25 prizes. This means the number of winners stays roughly the same, but the amount they win is lower.

If you still like premium bonds, you could buy more, as the maximum allowed is now £30,000.

Q I SOLD some building land at a profit. It was originally paid for by my parents, but registered in my name.

I would now like to return the entire amount to my parents, including all the interest gained. Are there any tax implications? I have already paid capital gains tax.

A This is a bit messy. Was the land really yours, in which case the money from your parents was either a gift or a loan?

Or was the land really theirs, since they paid for it, in which case they should have paid the tax and pocketed the profits? That said, we are where we are.

You have already declared the gain for tax. It would be difficult to tell the tax office now that your parents were the real landowners, and not you.

The remaining question mark is over how much you give them.

Return the original sum and there are no tax implications. Anything above this counts as interest and should be declared for tax by them.

They cannot claim any benefit from the gains tax that you already paid.

Many could profit from £38m bumper windfall

By Adam Aiken

MyMoney24 editor

CREDIT unions are to receive up to £38 million from taxpayers to modernise and expand so they can support a million more people.

Welfare reform minister Lord Freud said the additional funds would help credit unions buy new computer systems and infrastructure so they can increase the numbers of people they help to save and borrow.

The move follows a report by the Unite union which found workers were increasingly turning to payday loans because their wages run out before the end of the month, creating what the union said was a "debt disease" across the country.

The research by Unite found that one worker in eight regularly turned to short-term loan companies such as Wonga, Quick Quid and Money Shop to tide them over in the week before getting their wages.

Payday loan companies charge notoriously high rates of interest – sometimes as much as several thousand per cent a year.

Defenders of payday loans point out that their products are used for only a few days at a time, and that the annual interest rate does not give a fair reflection of the cost of a short-term loan. But there is no doubt that credit unions are a far more competitive option for borrowers.

"Credit unions are growing – almost doubling in membership since 2006 – but we want them to be a mainstream option for savers and borrowers just as they are in other countries and to ditch the image of a 'poor man's bank'," said Lord Freud.

Mark Lyonette, chief executive of the Association of British Credit Unions, said: "Credit unions in Britain already provide financial services to nearly a million people, many on low to moderate incomes.

"But we know that credit union sectors around the world, by working together behind the scenes and offering a broad range of products, reach many more people, including – but certainly not restricted to – those at the lower end of the income scale.

"So I very much welcome the recognition from government that credit unions should be a mainstream option for saving and borrowing.

"This £38m investment will help provide the infrastructure the sector needs and assist credit unions to develop services that will benefit everyone in the communities they serve, on a sustainable footing."

Neera Sharma, assistant director of policy and research at children's charity Barnardo's, said: "It is essen-

SO WHAT ARE CREDIT UNIONS?

AT THE end of September, 2011, Britain's credit unions were managing £703 million of savings on behalf of more than 950,000 people, and credit union members had been advanced loans totalling £570m.

But what are they – and are they safe?

Credit unions are financial co-operatives owned and controlled by their members.

Unlike banks, they do not have shareholders. They are also authorised and regulated by the Financial Services Authority and they are covered by the Financial Services Compensation Scheme.

This means that – as with banks and building societies – the first £85,000 of a member's savings are completely safe in the event that a credit union fails.

Credit unions are non-profit and allow members both to save and to borrow at competitive rates.

They provide an attractive alternative to other authorised products such as payday loans and doorstep lending.

They also play a vital role for people who find themselves excluded from the mainstream banking sector, but you do not need to be struggling or down on your luck to become a member.

There may once have been a stigma attached to credit unions, but nowadays many people choose credit unions ahead of other high-street providers because the products can beat those available elsewhere. There can also a feeling of community in belonging to a credit union.

Credit unions are based around a geographic area, employment or some other common link.

For example, some unions are for people who work in a certain industry, some might be for people who go to the same church, and others are for people who live in a particular suburb.

There are about 500 credit unions across the country.

that the most vulnerable families have access to feasible alternatives to exploitative high-cost credit, including fit-for-purpose bank accounts and good financial advice.

"Investing in credit unions must be at the heart of a package of government measures that ensure the poorest families are not left crippled by debt."

'The way these institutions have behaved is, frankly, frightening'

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

ANGER is raging across the county's business community at those bankers perceived as lining their own pockets at the expense of the economy.

Recent headlines about interest-rate-rigging, which saw Barclays fined £290 million, have once again put the spotlight on the big banks and their role in the economic downturn.

And their continuing reluctance to lend cash at affordable rates – while still paying higher-ranking staff huge bonuses – is putting any chance of a recovery at risk, says the body that represents small businesses.

"Throughout the years we have been brought up to believe the bank is a trusted friend," said Roger House, chairman of the Kent and Medway branch of the Federation of Small Businesses.

"Now the bank is viewed with doubt and mistrust. There is a great deal of anger and disbelief at the way they have handled their affairs.

"What is undeniable is they have fiddled and fiddled the figures.

"Millions of pounds has been made available to them and money that could have been used to stimulate growth in the economy has gone into bonuses.

"And one thing nobody talks about is what happens if a business obtains money and then it goes wrong. The way the banks behave is venal – they go after every penny the business has got and do not think twice about sending in the debt-collectors.

"The way these national institutions have behaved is, frankly, frightening. The economy is the bedrock of our society. People in business generate money.

ENRAGED: The FSB's Roger House

The banks may make a bit by investment, but the money is ours – it is our economy, not theirs to mess around with.

"On the one hand we have the Government saying there is a deep need for SMEs – which account for 90 per cent of the economy – but [on the other hand] business is saying things are coming to a stop. To save the whole economy, what is needed is 'affordable money' to stimulate growth. That is cash available to businesses to grow – not charged at huge rates of interest."

The FSB says it welcomed the Financial Services Agency's ruling that Interest Rate Swap Agreements (IRSAs) were mis-sold to small businesses, with the four main high-street lenders agreeing to compensate small and medium-sized firms mis-sold products.

The FSA said it had found "serious failings" in the way they marketed to some customers.

Barclays, HSBC, Lloyds Banking Group and Royal Bank of Scotland have all agreed to halt the sale of complex interest-rate hedges to smaller businesses and have pledged to compensate potentially thousands of customers who have been hurt by the products that have left some firms with hundreds of thousands and even millions in costs they say they were never warned about.

Martin Wheatley, head of financial conduct at the FSA, said he had received personal assurances from chief executives, including Barclays boss Bob Diamond when he was still in post, and Antonio Horta-Osorio, chief executive of Lloyds, that they would ensure all complaints were treated fairly.

But in addition to the moratorium imposed on the sale of these swaps, the FSB now wants an immediate suspension of repayments on these products.

And it says the FSA and the Financial Conduct Authority must also carry out a thorough market review to establish how the market should operate – if at all – for small businesses.

The FSB said regulators must also review the level of protection small firms were afforded under regulation as well as investigate how many other banks had been involved in the practice.

House said: "Suspending repayments immediately would relieve and possibly rescue small firms that have been burdened with huge bills. However, it will not resurrect the many small businesses that have already been destroyed by this appalling breach of trust – firms that turned to their banks for support and were instead exploited.

"Britain's hope of escaping recession relies largely on the optimism and entrepreneurial spirit of its small firms. But that optimism is being shattered by the ever-lengthening series of scandals emerging from the banks they have been forced to deal with through lack of competition and regulation.

"At what point will big banks' chief executives take responsibility for the litany of scandals their employees have been found guilty of and which are causing untold damage to small businesses and Britain's economy?

"It is not enough that the guilty banks should simply be forced to repay the money they tricked out of their small-business customers. The situation will not improve until and unless punitive measures are taken to stamp out these sharp practices and the fundamental attitude of the banks towards their small-business customers changes. The top managers of these huge institutions must be held accountable.

"The scale of the mis-selling scandal is still not clear. Too many affected firms have still not come forward and live in fear that if they speak out their loans will be foreclosed and their banks will force them out of businesses. This FSA ruling should give them the confidence to step forward – and they must do so.

"A company operating hotels in Folkestone and Canterbury bought two IRSAs from Barclays Capital in 2007-08. Since the BASE rates fell below 3.25 per cent they have been penalised with these IRSAs and have been paying a 'kicker rate', which currently amounts to more than £700,000."

LEISURE AND TOURISM

Year of discovery is on the App

FIFTY tourism businesses came to Chiddingstone Castle to meet the Discover The Garden Of England team, which is celebrating its first year with the launch of a free iPhone App.

This is intended to make it easier for visitors to find out everything they need to know about what's happening in Kent and parts of East Sussex.

The group also has a website with information on accommodation, venues to visit, activities, shopping and places to eat.

Visitors to the website are increasing by an average of more than 30 per cent month on month, and with a 12-month search-optimisation and Google adwords campaign already under way, the site's creators hope visitor numbers will continue to rise strongly.

"The website has a full calendar of events, as well as themed itineraries, an itinerary builder, accommodation booking, mapping and the What's Nearby function, which links places to visit and stay with events and activities, making it easy for visitors to plan a day," said director Juliet Steinmetz.

RECOGNITION

This woman is an inspiration

CATHY Beare, group chief financial officer of Newington-based Holiday Extras, has joined the Women 1st Top 100 Club.

This is made up of the most influential women in the hospitality, passenger transport, travel and tourism industry.

Announced at the Women 1st Shine Awards, Beare joined Carolyn McCall OBE, chief executive of easyJet and Women 1st Woman of the Year; Kellie Rixon, group brand-development director at De Vere Group; and Janis Kong OBE, a non-executive director for TUI, VisitBritain and Network Rail.

She said: "It's a great honour to join these fantastic women who are achieving remarkable things in their careers and for their businesses. I'm very proud to be seen as a positive role model for the next generation of industry leaders."

Sharon Glancy, founder of Women 1st, said: "The quality of the nominations we received this year was remarkable. Each and every one was an inspiration – it was a tough task to make our final selection.

"The extraordinary women in our Top 100 are a critical force who will play no small role in ensuring the future success of the industry."

Minister explains Green Deal on visit to heating company

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE Green Deal, the Government's new flagship carbon-emission-reduction policy, will bring huge benefits to households and businesses while providing a much-needed financial shot in the arm for companies that get involved in the initiative, a senior minister claims.

Gregory Barker MP, Minister for Climate Change, addressed a green-energy summit at the offices of Swale Heating in Sittingbourne to put the case for the initiative.

Responding to an invitation by Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson, the minister explained to an audience of private- and public-sector delegates how the Green Deal would work when it came into force later this year.

Barker said that under the Green Deal bill-payers would be able to get energy-efficiency improvements without having to front up the cash. Instead, firms who become approved providers under the scheme would provide the capital, getting their money back via the energy bill. At the heart of the offer is a simple rule – that estimated savings on bills will always equal or exceed the cost of the work.

"Every property considered under the Green Deal will be assessed by an accredited, objective adviser, and the energy-efficiency measures installed by an accredited installer. The scheme will provide a substantial opportunity for companies here in Kent and elsewhere to tap into a huge potential market.

"Millions of residential and commercial properties could benefit from the energy-efficient savings these improvements could bring – measures like cavity wall and loft insulation, solid wall insulation, double-glazed windows and new doors, solar pv panels, energy-saving heating controls and lighting systems, A-rated boilers and more.

"Within the next few weeks I will be issuing advice to councils to draw up a strategy to roll out the Green Deal in their areas," said Barker, who acknowledged that a big job lay ahead in explaining the scheme to the public and other target audiences.

Responding to questions about small to medium-sized regional firms being squeezed out of the scheme by national home-improvement suppliers, the minister said he expected "an army of SMEs" to get involved and urged local authorities in Kent to help manage this.

He also denied a claim that the Green Deal would be a 'flash in the pan' initiative that fizzled out in six months: "This is a 20-year programme. We will not have a big flashy launch with a huge advertising budget. It will be rolled out in a controlled and steady way, based on partnerships between Government and local councils and groups," he said.

Swale Heating managing director Mark Pope said the company was keen to put its weight behind the scheme: "Ahead of this meeting we understood the ethos of the Green Deal, but it was unclear how it would be delivered. Now it is clear there are opportunities for independent heating-services companies like ours to be involved and we look forward to finding out more about becoming an accredited provider."

Henderson said: "One of the reasons I invited the minister is because some of our smaller companies here in Kent have concerns about being excluded from the Green Deal.

"There has also been the worry that households will postpone decisions on home improvements like new windows until the Green Deal is introduced later this year, leading to work drying up for the next few months."

PAYMENT

Phone device to help ensure you are paid on time

SMALL businesses suffering from late payments and bad debt could benefit from a new payment system that will enable companies of all sizes to accept credit and debit card payments through their mobile phone.

mPowa is a service that includes a mobile-phone app and a reader that connects to a smartphone or mobile device either by plugging into its headphone socket or via Bluetooth.

It enables customers to make payments on the go using their card in a way never before seen in Britain.

The mobile app is free to download on iPhone, iPad, Android, Windows and Blackberry devices and functions as the control centre that accepts the payment.

It monitors payments made by card as well as cash and cheque, as well as processing each transaction securely.

The reader, when connected to a mobile phone, is used to swipe the magnetic strip of the card, or for the chip and pin device, and the card is then inserted and the customer prompted to enter their PIN code.

mPowa will enable businesses, including sole traders, to take payments immediately without waiting for invoices to be issued and paid.

The device is launched as many businesses are struggling to survive because of bad debt. In the UK, £35.5 billion of debt is owed to SMEs alone.

In the second half of last year, small and medium-sized firms reported waiting an average of 29.6 days longer than agreed payment terms, which is a figure that represents an increase over the first half of 2011.

Because many firms are currently unable to accept card payments due to the cost of devices, mPowa will function as a way of shortening the payment process from what can be months to a matter of minutes.

Chamber's annual event ensures a wealth of networking as businesses get together

KENT Invicta Chamber of Commerce's 26th annual exhibition proved a great hit at Ashford International Hotel.

Rebranded the Kent & Medway B2B to reflect the chamber's new wider geographical area, it was supported by businesses from across the county.

Longer opening hours, a shell system of stands with a revised layout, presentations by keynote business speakers, a special start-up section, speed networking and an Entrepreneur Panel were some of the innovations for this year.

Together with more than 130 exhibitors, more than 1,000 visitors and the established facilities of business advice and workshops, Kent & Medway B2B 2012 was the place to discover the best in products and services, find new contacts, get advice on how to improve business efficiency, or learn how to develop an idea to start up your own business.

The presentations by business speakers Richard Farleigh and Paula Wynne were well attended and much appreciated, as were all the other business-advice opportunities. Richard Farleigh also helped choose and present the Best Stand awards.

A constant flow of visitors, coupled with interaction between the exhibitors themselves, provided many positive leads and contacts for potential cooperation and expansion, with exhibitors reporting substantial prospects arising from exhibition attendance.

Many commented on the value of the exhibition in raising their profile among the wider business community and the opportunity to meet other business people with whom they would not normally come into contact.

Chamber chief executive Jo James said: "We always strive to improve our exhibition as much as we are able to increase the benefits it provides.

"This year we deliberately set out to give it a whole new look, with a fresh approach with enhanced facilities and attractions.

"I believe, judging by the comments I have heard from exhibitors and visitors, that we accomplished what we set out to do – I hope so.

"As with all these events, the day was a culmination of a lot of work and effort by many people. I extend thanks to all of them, too numerous to name.

"Specifically, however, I would like to thank Wilkins Kennedy, Furley Page, and Jelf Insurance Brokers as main event sponsors; Auratek Ltd for sponsorship of the Start-Up area and the Best Stand awards; our excellent speakers and presenters; and all our other sponsors for their help."

Training, courses and careers

College courses at a great price

NORTH West Kent College offers a range of Higher Education (HE) courses at half the cost of university. From £4,995, students can gain a foundation degree qualification or Higher National Diploma/Certificate and improve their chances of employability while living at home.

The Dartford campus, from where most of the courses will be delivered, offers free parking and is accessible by easy transport links via rail, bus and the college's free shuttle bus.

The college provides foundation degrees affiliated to The University of Greenwich and Higher National Diplomas/Certificates (HND/C) by Edexcel.

These qualifications involve links to industry, and after two years students have the opportunity to apply to top up their qualification to a degree or go straight into industry. It is also possible to work while studying on several of the HE programmes.

The HE courses include business, early years, photography, professional writing, sports science and sports studies. The college is also introducing new HE courses from September in performing arts, travel and tourism and public services. In addition, the college offers a part-time HNC in electronic and electrical engineering at the Gravesend campus.

Brian Starbuck, curriculum manager for higher education, said: "We understand the rising cost of tuition fees is making it difficult for people to go to university. We are confident that by offering higher-education courses at a lower cost, it will make it easier for potential students to achieve this."

The business HND develops the knowledge and skills appropriate to administrative and management careers in many areas of business. Elements of the course include quantitative techniques, economics and business functions.

The early years foundation degree provides the opportunity to progress into teaching or management, with a potential progression to an early years professional status course. The course will benefit students by developing confidence for the workplace, problem-solving and project management.

Photography is ideal for people with a passion for the art who have a desire to make a living from their images. The programme covers studio and location photography, portraiture, digital post-production, advertising and editorial photography, plus critical and contextual studies.

Professional writing focuses on turning creative ideas into revenue. The course has generated an effective stepping-stone for students to progress to becoming published authors or moving into creative industries such as press and advertising.

Sports science is based on the science behind sports performance, which underpins the theory and practical elements of a range of subjects including practical sports performance, fitness training, sports psychology, health and anatomy. The course is ideal for students who wish to pursue careers such as fitness coach, personal trainer, sports nutritionist and sports psychologist.

Sports studies provides students with an insight into the world of sports coaching and the sports industry. The course covers practical performance, coaching, anatomy and sports-event organisation. It aims to produce physical-education teachers, coaches, sports development officers and leisure centre staff.

The Miskin Theatre's performing-arts course will benefit actors and technicians, providing them with the relevant training and experience to prepare them for drama school or to start work directly within the industry.

Public services addresses a range of areas from justice and punishment to psychology. The course would be an advantage to students who wish to progress in a career in the police, fire service or Armed Forces.

Travel and tourism covers subjects from marketing to visitor-attraction management. The course is ideal for those who would like to boost their prospects in the travel and tourism industry.

Places on these courses will be sought after, so please get in touch while they remain available. Call North West Kent College on 0800 074 1447 or www.nwkc.ac.uk.

Town hall's up for Euro award for scheme to get people back into work

A COUNCIL initiative to help get people back into employment has been shortlisted for an award celebrating Europe's most innovative projects.

The Medway Council-led project SUCCES (Sustainable Uplifting Client Centred Employment Support), which is designed to give unemployed people the help they need to get back into work, has been nominated to compete in the annual Regiostars awards, run by the European Commission.

The Regiostars Award identifies good practice in regional development and highlights original and innovative projects that could be inspiring to other areas.

SUCCES is part funded by the European Union's Interreg IVA 2 Seas programme and provides training and specialist support services to people over the age of 16 either looking for work or with a low skills set and little experience.

This can be anything from help with writing CVs and interview techniques to self-esteem courses and networking events with employers.

The cross-border initiative is running in Medway, Great Yarmouth and Waveney, Grand-Synthe in France and Kortrijk, Belgium.

In Medway, the project is led by the council and involves the work of a range of community groups and services, including the Employ Medway Advice Centre, All Saints Community Project, Strood Community Project, Medway Citizens Advice Bureau, and the North Kent Training Service.

Taylor Bennett, 22, from Chatham, had been unemployed for nearly a year when he was helped by the SUCCES project. He is now a finance apprentice at Medway Council.

"The SUCCES project has given me the confidence and self-belief that I needed to not just secure employment, but start a career."

"I found the self-esteem course in particular was invaluable, and I would recommend it to anyone" said Taylor.

The project has been shortlisted along with two other Medway Council-led projects, AIMER and ACCES, and selected as final nominees for the Regiostars competition.

Medway Council's Cllr Jane Chitty, said: "It's great to see the work of the SUCCES project and the team behind it being recognised for the valuable work they are doing."

Finalists will be invited to present their project to a jury in October and the final competition winners will be announced in February 2013.

JUST THE JOB: Medway Council's SUCCES scheme could be in line for European glory

Bursary to teach computer teachers

THE University of Kent has been awarded a £1,000 BCS education bursary to promote the importance of computer science as an academic discipline.

Dr Bill Mitchell, director of the BCS Academy of Computing, said: "It is with great pleasure that the Institute makes the bursary awards. We had over 200 applications for bursary funding so to be awarded one is no mean feat."

"We are now looking forward to following the progress of each of the successful projects and sharing their experience to inspire others."

The university's computing education research group will use the bursary to subsidise its summer schools and evening classes for computing teachers. The first event will be a summer school in August for 30 computing teachers, aimed at those who are starting to teach Key Stage 4 or 5.

The evening course will allow local schools to forge links with the university to begin to establish a support network for local teachers.

The presenters at the events will include Professor Sally Fincher, recipient of the Association for Computing Machinery award for outstanding contribution to computer science education, and Professor Michael Kölling, named a distinguished member of the ACM in recognition of his contributions to computer science education.

Neil Brown, research associate, explained: "We are very pleased to have secured a BCS education bursary."

"This is an exciting time for computing in schools, fuelled by the introduction of the new wave of computing GCSEs."

"But we need to make sure teachers in the schools are prepared to teach computing, and in many cases this means access to continuing professional development and training."

"We hope that our summer school and evening classes will provide opportunities for teachers, both locally and nationally, to increase their skills and gain confidence in the material that they will teach."

Schools & education

Teen goalie signs for Arsenal and swaps school for training ground

SCHOOLBOY goalkeeper Ryan Huddart has swapped school for the Arsenal Academy after it snapped him up for its young Gunners training programme.

The 6ft 3in goalie been signed up into a full-time role at the academy in Shenley where he will continue his studies.

Ryan, 15, said a fond farewell to students and staff at The Charles Dickens School in Broadstairs which has allowed him to leave a year earlier at the end of Year 10.

Headteacher Andrew Olsson said: "We may have another young England keeper in the mould of Joe Hart – we certainly would not stand in his way and we have worked with Arsenal to ensure his education continues."

Sports master Gary McClellan said: "Youth development is run by Arsenal's former Ireland international midfielder Liam Brady. He knows just about all there is to know about the game. His passion is obvious and a young sportsman like Ryan could not be in a better place."

Students get union trophy for debate on improving transport

MIDKENT College Students' Union has won an award from the National Union of Students for its efforts in improving local transport.

Last March the SU hosted a travel debate to enable students to air their grievances in public, resulting in bus company Arriva launching several new services to the Medway Campus.

The project had already earned the union second place in the House of Commons Speaker's School Council Awards, but there was further success for the students when they won Campaign of the Year at the annual NUS Awards.

Former SU president James Phillips, who chaired the travel debate, said: "We are really pleased the student voice at MidKent College is being listened to by Arriva, and the hard work of our volunteers has been recognised by the National Union of Students."

"We are thankful to all of those who have supported us in this process. For me personally this was a fantastic way to end my term as Students' Union president."

Topics covered at the travel debate included the scrapping of the Education Maintenance Allowance, the rising cost of public transport and problems with existing student travel schemes.

Medway councillors Vince Maple, Andrew Mackness and Geoff Juby participated in the event, as did Gillingham MP Rehman Chishti and representatives of train company Southeastern.

Young science star wins month-long study trip to famous Israeli institute

A SEVENOAKS schoolgirl has been named as one of 10 top science students from around the UK who have been awarded scholarships to attend a month-long programme at the prestigious Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel.

Catherine Xu from Sevenoaks School will spend three weeks working with Weizmann Institute scientists on current research in biology, biochemistry, chemistry, physics, or mathematics and computer science.

Their time at the institute will be followed by a week of travelling around Israel.

The participants were picked from more than 30 applicants. After a lengthy application process, their passion for science showed these students to be the perfect candidates to join 80 other future scientists from around the world.

Applications for the 2013 programme open in October, 2012, and forms will be available from www.weizmann.org.uk.

Weizmann UK – formerly known as the Weizmann Institute Foundation – was established in the UK in 1950 as part of the global network of 17 countries, which stimulate support for the awareness of the Weizmann Institute, its research programmes, scientists and development projects.

The Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot, Israel, is one of the world's top-ranking multidisciplinary research institutions.

Horizon Care is an energetic, progressive and one of the most innovative providers of young people's residential care in the UK, and provides the highest level of care by the use of the best resources available.

We have a number of positions available within our residential homes in Deal, Margate and Ramsgate and are looking for the right, enthusiastic people to join Horizon Care and move forward with us in our future plans.

Senior Residential Care Workers:

(Mandatory requirement: NVQ Level 3 Health and Social Care (children) or equivalent)
Should have at least 2 years experience of working with or caring for young people (10-16 years old) in small group residential settings. There will be opportunities for the right people to be involved in the continuing development of the homes standards and provisions of services. Successful candidates will be highly motivated to develop and maintain relationships with young people and their families and engage with local agencies and community.

- Direct work with the residents including keyworking and generally taking an active part in their daily lives.
- Contact and dialogue with Social Services personnel and outside agencies who have an involvement in the project or interest in its residents.
- Taking responsibility for the welfare of the home with regard to health and safety and primary care issues, as well as making autonomous decisions about individual residents requests and behaviour whilst on shift.

Residential Care Workers - qualified and unqualified:

Working as part of a close-knit team within one of our residential homes, you will assist in the everyday and personal care, education and treatment of young people.

We are looking for motivated and committed individuals, with a calm approach. Experience of working with children and young people or in residential care is desirable but not essential as personality and ability are important factors and all training will be provided to suitable applicants. You must be able to work as a team member, on your own initiative and to high standards. Good interpersonal and communication skills are essential.

For all of the above positions the following criteria apply:

- must hold a full UK driving licence
- be over the age of 21
- successful applicants are required to provide an enhanced disclosure and satisfactory references. Disclosure expense will be met by employer.
- Must be prepared to work shifts (including sleepovers) on a rota basis

In the first instance please forward your full cv via email to: jean.ingham@horizoncare.co.uk

OLYMPIC TORCH RELAY

OLYMPIC TORCH RELAY, KENT (TRAFFIC RESTRICTIONS) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012
THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984 (AS AMENDED BY THE LONDON OLYMPIC GAMES AND PARALYMPIC GAMES ACT 2006)

To facilitate the holding of the Olympic Torch Relay through Kent, and in the interests of road safety, Kent County Council has made an Order placing restrictions on traffic, as defined below.

This Order comes into force on or after 16 July 2012 and will be in force when indicated by signage, and/or as directed by a uniformed Police Officer.

The main effects of the Order are to prohibit traffic on the roads and adjoining junctions of roads which form part of the Olympic Torch Relay Route.

Closures will be on a rolling basis, starting with the first vehicle of the torch activation convoy, and ending once the flame convoy has passed through.

It is anticipated that closures will normally last no longer than 30 minutes.

For operational or security reasons, additional restrictions may be imposed or minor variations made by Kent Police, in the interests of safety to the torch and to the public.

Because of the nature of the closures, it is not practical to recommend alternative routes and motorists are advised to plan their journeys in advance to minimise the impact of the torch relay on their journey.

The Olympic Torch Route can be viewed on www.london2012.com/torch-relay/route. Closures are listed here on a day by day basis, in the order they are due to occur, with approximate timings.

Some are also some additional restrictions and road closures which are described as and where they occur, within the Schedule below.

THE INTERVIEW

Amanda Reifer

Feel good and enjoy the sunshine

Cover Drive singer tells Joe Bill why she is so happy with Caropop

THE Caribbean has always been a hotbed of musical ability – you only have to look at the Marley family to know the depth and diversity of the talent among the islands.

New Caropop group Cover Drive are the latest collective to appear on the music scene, signing to British label Polydor from their home in Barbados.

The foursome have already had a UK No 1 and bagged two other top-10 hits; they have also opened for pop-star Rhianna on her tour. But the group's laid-back Caribbean attitude remains ever-present despite the developing hysteria surrounding them.

Lead singer Amanda Reifer said: "I would describe our album as the cheapest trip to Barbados you can get. If you want a vacation and you can't afford the flight, just buy our album – it is feel-good, sunshine music.

"We like to call it Caropop music, which is a mixture of Caribbean music like reggae, calypso or dancehall mixed with pop music. It makes you feel good – it reminds me of being on a beach in the sunshine."

Cover Drive will be performing at the Sound Island Festival at Quex Park, Birchington, later this month, but the weather and the atmosphere may be a little different to that of their first gig almost two years ago.

The 22-year-old said: "Our first ever gig was opening for Rhianna in Barbados for that leg of her tour. It was our first gig ever and it was in front of 25,000 people, which was incredible.

"Actually it was really scary. We hadn't been on stage before, never in front of that many people, and obviously opening for Rhianna – she is a mega superstar across the world.

"We were really nervous at first, but we had so much fun and she was really cool with us and as soon as we got on stage all the nerves went away. It was an amazing first gig."

The rest of the band is made up of Barry 'Bar Man' Hill on guitar, Jamar Harding on bass and T-Ray Armstrong on drums, but the crew have all been playing together for years.

Reifer said: "We got together to make music through all of us being friends and living in the same place. I used to babysit T-Ray; he and Jamar are the same age and knew each other; and I met Bar Man at college.

"We were all just kind of wasting time playing music together and not really going anywhere with it. T-Ray's mum, she is now our manager, suggested that we stop wasting our time and started a band. And since we did that, it has been amazing."

Cover Drive went on to use social-networking video site YouTube to launch themselves, and it seemed to work pretty well.

"We thought 'How can we let people know we are around?'. There weren't too many places we could perform because we were under age and we just went for YouTube instead.

"We played some covers and wanted to make them really fun and show off our personalities.

And T-Ray played some random instruments – including a Red Bull can. I think. We had fun and put the video up and it just got so many views. It grabbed some interest from a label and now we have done more than 60 covers as well as our own stuff."

Their song Twilight bagged a No 1 earlier this year, while their follow-up single Sparks took a No 4 spot from debut album Bajan Style.

"The group No Doubt are our biggest influence," said Reifer. "We love them and are a little bit obsessed with them. I know everything about them – a little too obsessed, maybe.

"We have met Tony Kanal from No Doubt and worked with him on a single. It didn't go on our album in the end because we were so star-struck that we didn't even get to finish it. He was cool and a really nice guy.

"We also met will.i.am from Black Eyed Peas and he gave us some really good advice. We didn't want to do any collaborations on our album in the end – we wanted people to just get a feel for us."

However, for their coming single the group have announced that they will be working with a UK star.

"We are doing some collaborations this time. Our new single will have a guest singer on it – I don't want to tell you, but OK I will tell you. Dappy from N-Dubz is going to be on our next single. We just shot the video with him yesterday."

Whether or not he will appear at Sound Island isn't clear, but Cover Drive did confirm two other rumours. The first is that they will be touring with X Factor group JLS this summer and the second is that their name derives from a cricketing term...

"Cover Drive is a cricket shot. T-Ray's dad is obsessed with cricket and we were trying to think of a name for the band. He used to train the Barbados cricket team and all that and we couldn't think of any names. So he said 'What about Cover Drive – it's an excellent shot in cricket'. We strive for excellence, so this was perfect and we liked how it sounded."

At the Sound Island gig the group will be on the same stage as Olly Murs and Rizzle Kicks, two acts that they already rate highly.

"We spend most of our time in the UK. We are signed to Polydor Records here, so this is where we tend to stay.

"We have been back and forth from the UK for the last two years, so of course we know all about Olly Murs and Rizzle Kicks – we are super-excited to be performing with them."

Cover Drive will play the Sound Island Festival at Quex Park on Sunday, July 29. Visit www.gigantic.com or phone 0844 8889991 for tickets. They can also be booked by visiting Margate Winter Gardens.

More attention to detail would break the chain of mediocrity

In a time when celebrity chefs dominate our screens and the culinary arts are all the rage, top independent restaurants are cleaning up. And while there will always be a market for chain restaurants, I cannot help but think they have had a raw deal of late.

Now, chain diners are not expecting their meals to be served up by Heston Blumenthal, but a good dish is still a good dish. So when news broke that the ever-reliable Pizza Express had opened a new restaurant in trendy Whitstable, there were no tears from me.

The décor of the new venue is modern and clean, while diners can watch the chefs at work.

My other half and I opted for the classic Italian antipasto sharing dish at £9.90. It arrived on a fancy tripod and was perfectly presented. "Cured Italian meats", as described on the menu, were in fact slices of an Italian sausage... singular but still delicious. This was on a bed of rocket, warm dough sticks, roasted tomatoes, large green Sicilian olives, baby mozzarella and sweet pepperdew peppers.

The ingredients worked well and were fresh-tasting, but without a dressing the rocket was overpowering and dry.

For the mains my guest went pasta with the pollo pesto, made up of red onions, chicken, mozzarella, Parmesan, pesto sauce and mushrooms at £9.60. Very tasty, I was told.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

I went pizza and for a Romana-style base (very thin and crispy) with a new recipe, the meatball Bolognese. To me that sounded like heaven for £11.75. It featured a Bolognese sauce, beef meatballs, roquito peppers, mozzarella, Grana Padano (an Italian cheese) and rocket. It arrived and magnificently covered half of the table. However, I couldn't actually see the pizza for the small field of rocket that covered it. Once most of that had been picked off, the pizza was all I thought it would be. Superbly cooked, great texture, great taste.

Dessert was banoffee pie at £4.95 for her and chocolate-fudge cake with cream (£4.95) for me.

The latter arrived with ice-cream rather than cream. I wasn't too fussed about the change, but I do hate it when service staff don't write down the order and then get it wrong.

My warmed-up pudding was average.

With just three tables in the restaurant at this point, my partner had asked for the bill with the delivery of our desserts. It didn't come.

With the clearance of the plates, we asked again for the bill. It didn't come.

Diners from another table went to the desk to ask for the bill and only once the waitress had finished her conversations did she deliver it.

Half an hour after we had first asked, I went to the desk and paid £53.05. It isn't always the food that distinguishes the independent restaurants from the chains – it is the little details and the staff that can make for a great experience. Maybe it's just a question of caring.

The gap is bridged

AFTER almost four years of standing unused on Maidstone's waterside, the former River Bar building has been restored to its former glory.

The picturesque venue in the heart of the county town will be taken under the wing of Michael Schembri and renamed Bridges.

The new business will incorporate a stylish wine bar offering modern English cuisine on the lower floor of the building, while upstairs will house a restaurant offering à la carte dining.

With a new experienced chef at the helm, the kitchen team will be using top local ingredients for quality fish and meat dishes.

Having lain dormant for many years, the building had been damaged by arsonists and was in danger of becoming a regular haunt for drug-users.

The business has also created jobs, with 12 members of staff already having been recruited. The building is ideal for weddings, parties and big functions. For more information, you can phone 01622 753700.

It's Gazza the Great Paul Gascoigne

The Orchard Theatre, Dartford

Thursday, November 8, at 8pm
01322 220000
www.orchardtheatre.co.uk

ONE of English football's best-ever players, Paul Gascoigne, will be making an appearance at Dartford's Orchard theatre.

An Audience With Paul Gascoigne has been confirmed for later this year and the stories are sure to flow.

Gazza, who is as well known for his mischievous antics off the pitch as his dazzling performances on it, will reveal the memories of his sensational career.

From plastic breasts to the dentist's chair and from tears in Italy to that goal against Scotland, Gazza is a world icon. He will be joined on stage by compère Terry Baker and special guest Ron Harris. Tickets are on sale at £40

A-maize-ing Pick this place for a puzzle

Penshurst Place, near Tonbridge

Saturday, July 21, to September
www.penshurstplace.com

FOR the first time, Penshurst Place will have a maze attraction for visitors to enjoy during the school summer holidays this year.

But get this – the maze is made out of, well, maize. And it's sure to provide hours of eco-fun for the family.

The new attraction has been designed by Mazescape and will be open at Penshurst from Saturday, July 21, to mid-September, depending on the weather conditions.

The maze will be free to visit for full-paying garden-ticket-holders and Penshurst Place season-ticket-holders.

For voucher- and other card-holders there will be a small extra charge of £2 per adult, £1 per child, per visit to take on the winding, life-size puzzle.

Art exhibition TV contestant is in the city

Lilford Gallery, Palace Street, Canterbury

Sat, July 14-Sat, August 4
01227 766616

BRITISH artist Charles Williams will stage an exhibition of his work at Canterbury's Lilford Gallery this month to coincide with his appearance on BBC Two arts contest Show Me The Monet.

The artist is featured in the series that follows the fortunes of amateur and professional artists from across the UK as they compete for a spot at a grand exhibition at the Royal College Of Art in London.

Williams, who was born in the US and raised in England, studied at Maidstone College Of Art at the same time as Tracey Emin and went on to study at the Royal Academy, London, where in 1992 he winning the top prize for painting.

Williams's Canterbury exhibition runs until the first week of August.

Joyous arrival Black rhinos are up by one

Port Lympne, Hythe

Open from 9.30am-6pm
0844 8424647
www.aspinallfoundation.org

KEEPERS at Port Lympne Wild Animal Park have been thrilled by the birth of a black rhinoceros at the site.

The little female was born just two weeks ago to mum

Nyasa and dad Zambezi, taking the number of black rhinos at the park to 14.

The youngster is already running about and playing in the sunshine as she gets used to her surroundings in the Kent countryside.

Only last month, three black rhino were released back into the wild in Tanzania through the Aspinall Foundation, with a little help from Prince William.

See the yet-unnamed baby on the African Safari at the park, which will be running every day throughout the summer.

Cars, a castle and collections Vintage days

Chiddingstone Castle
Wednesday, July 25
01892 870347
chiddingstonecastle.org.uk

At a special event later this month, visitors to picturesque Chiddingstone Castle can admire beautifully-restored veteran motor cars.

More than 80 vehicles will be on display in front of the castle, arriving as part of the Veteran Car Company Best Of West Kent Run 2012, which takes the cars on a route around the countryside.

After exploring the grounds, visitors can choose to discover the secrets inside the castle and the fascinating collections of Denys Eyre Bower, including the famous Japanese Collection, the Egyptian artefacts and the Stuart and Jacobite exhibition.

Tickets are priced at £8 for adults and £5 for children, with the under-fives going in free.

It's not just a silly phase 10cc on tour

The Marlowe, Canterbury
Thursday, October 11
01227 787787
www.marlowetheatre.com

LEGENDARY 70s pop band 10cc have announced that their 40th anniversary tour will include Canterbury's Marlowe theatre.

Having sold more than 15 million albums in the UK and 30 million worldwide, 10cc are celebrating an incredible journey through No 1 hits such as I'm Not In Love (1975) and Dreadlock Holiday (1978).

Founding member Graham Gouldman said: "It's hard to believe it's 40 years since 10cc was born in Strawberry Studios in Stockport. I'm immensely proud of all we have achieved. As long as the fans want to hear the songs played live, I'll be happy to oblige."

10cc earned public acclaim for their 11 top-10 UK singles, some of which have been covered by the likes of Fun Lovin' Criminals.

So much for so many Battle of Britain flight

Capel-le-Ferne, Folkestone
Sunday, July 15
Flypasts at 1.30pm and 3pm
www.battleofbritainmemorial.org

THE Battle of Britain Memorial Flight will pass over Capel-le-Ferne this weekend to mark the anniversary of the historic combat.

Both a Spitfire and a Hurricane will fly over the Kent coast to salute the 72nd anniversary of the battle as the nation pays its respects to the almost 3,000 airmen who took to the sky to end Nazi invasion plans in the summer of 1940.

Twelve members – all now in their 90s – of the elite group of men Winston Churchill first described as The Few will parade at the National Memorial To The Few, on the coast road just outside Folkestone. The event will start with the first flypast at 1.30pm.

Back in town Alfie Boe calls by for a return

The Orchard Theatre, Dartford
Thursday, July 19
01322 220000
www.orchardtheatre.co.uk

OVERWHELMING public demand has led to English tenor Alfie Boe returning for a second performance at The Orchard in Dartford.

The West End, Broadway and recording superstar will be treading the Dartford boards for a second time this year, on Thursday, July 19, following his sell-out show in May.

Boe has brought various genres of music to new audiences around the world and will once again showcase his spectacular voice.

His tour follows the phenomenal success of his two latest albums Bring Him Home and Alfie. Both albums have been in the top-10 best-seller list and between them sold more than half a million records.

www.kent.ac.uk/gulbenkian

WIDELY known as the group who formed on Facebook, classical-pop crossover band Blake have booked a show at The Gulbenkian in Canterbury for later this year.

The foursome have already sold half a million albums worldwide and been nominated for two Brit Awards, while leading the anthems for the English national rugby team at Twickenham.

The vocal harmony quartet present their new UK tour Love Lifts Us Up, on which they will perform their unique renditions of pop, classical and West-End anthems.

Humphrey Berney, Ollie Baines, Jules Knight and Stephen Bowman have been in demand after performances and interviews on Daybreak, BBC Breakfast, Loose Women, The Alan Titchmarsh Show and Sky News.

The new blues Introducing Mr Bofanti

The Duke of Cumberland, Whitstable Saturday, July 21
www.wegotickets.com

UP-AND-COMING singer and guitarist Marcus Bonfanti heads to the WhitLive introducing stage at The Duke of Cumberland.

Nominated in this year's

British Blues Awards for best vocal and best guitarist, this spellbinding young performer has a voice like sand and glue and is likely to be loosening the plaster from the ceiling.

Described as a mix between Jimmy Page and Seasick Steve, the modern bluesman will follow in the footsteps of ShyChlo and Janice Graham Band, who sold out the venue.

Tickets are available from The Duke of Cumberland, Gatefield Sounds in Whitstable and Herne Bay, Canterbury Rock and online at www.wegotickets.com.

Kneel before the king Summer jousting

Hever Castle, Edenbridge

Sat and Sun, July 14-15, and through summer 01732 865224
www.hevercastle.co.uk

HENRY VIII invites all to come and join in the special celebration at Hever Castle when Sir Samuel of Hever is knighted.

The ceremony on July 14-15 marks the start of the annual jousting tournament. Spectators will be treated to a display of action, stunts, falls and fights as the Knights of Royal England bring the medieval sport to life in this castle of kings.

Each tournament starts when the King and Queen arrive at the castle at 2pm to greet visitors and invite them to the jousting arena.

The battles begin at 2.15pm and last about an hour.

The tournaments continue during the summer weekends. For more dates, see online.

TOWIE star on Sound Island Jessica Wright

Quex Park, Birchington
Sat and Sun, July 28-29
0844 888 9991
www.gigantic.com

JESSICA Wright, star of hit TV show The Only Way Is Essex, has announced she will be performing at the Sound Island Festival.

The reality TV regular will be using the Quex Park event to push her debut single due for release in the coming weeks. Wright is signed to the same dance record label as NDubz's Tulisa Contostavlos.

The singer will join the Sunday line-up, which now includes headliner Olly Murs, Rizzle Kicks, Cover Drive and Diana Vickers.

Opening night of the festival promises to capture the nostalgia of 90s Britpop with performances by a top line-up including headliners James, Echo & the Bunnymen, Cast, The Farm and Space.

SCHOOL'S OUT

ATTRACTIONS

Make the most of the county during the summer holiday

NOW the school holidays are upon us it is time for the family to venture out and explore those attractions that are right on our awesome doorstep.

Discover the captivating essence of the Garden of England by wandering along lanes past fields, orchards, vineyards and oast houses or across the downs that form such a distinctive landscape.

Or travel to the coast and experience the grandeur of the White Cliffs of Dover, the expanse of marshland along the north coast or the sandy beaches of Thanet.

Taste the local delicacies, ranging from the Lamb of Romney Marsh to the oysters of Whitstable, and get a feeling for the reasons Kent has such an enviable reputation for all kinds of astonishing produce.

It is also time to be enriched by the things that make Kent unique and bring its exciting past alive.

Visit Canterbury – with Chaucer's pilgrims – and Rochester – with Charles Dickens – and follow the maritime adventures at Chatham Historic Dockyard that have shaped Kent from Roman invasion to the Second World War. Castles, historic homes, churches and cathedrals, as well as gardens and parks, are all in abundance just waiting to be discovered.

And towns and cities are bang up to date, with galleries, museums and theatre, Michelin-starred dining and entertaining nightlife giving you so much to do.

So many varied destinations and experiences are waiting – and the best news of all is that they are all so close at hand. Enjoy!

Awards success for homebuilder

PROPERTY developers Bellway Home received 23 Quality Awards at this year's NHBC Pride In The Job awards.

The annual awards recognise outstanding quality in housebuilding throughout the UK. Drawn from a pool of some 13,000 site managers across the UK, Pride In The Job rewards the best site managers responsible for managing the construction of homes from start to finish and who have a unique influence on the overall quality of the finished product.

The company has recently been involved in housing schemes in Canterbury, Rochester and Maidstone and its surrounding villages.

For more than 30 years, Pride In The Job has been at the forefront of the National House Building Council's work to improve housing standards for the benefit of home-owners.

It is the only UK-wide competition that is dedicated to, and directly recognises, site managers who demonstrate commitment to achieving high standards in housebuilding.

John Watson, chief executive of Bellway, said: "The awards are highly regarded within the industry – winners earn the true respect of their peers. Anyone gaining a first-round award is already in the top 3 per cent of their profession and can be very proud of their achievement."

"To have continuously improved over the last four years demonstrates our commitment to providing the best-quality homes for our buyers."

Regional winners will be announced at ceremonies in the autumn, with successful individuals then progressing to the Grand Gala Final in London in January.

Take advantage of a slump in prices

DEVELOPER Pentland Homes, has reduced the prices at its Henbury Manor development, bringing two of the farm-style family homes under £500,000 and so reducing the burden of 4 per cent stamp duty.

Henbury Manor is a farm-style development in the countryside of the Elham Valley.

It features six properties, one of which is now sold, leaving five elegant four-bedroom homes.

Pentland Homes is hosting an open day on Sunday (July 15) to showcase the properties and discuss the part-exchange scheme with interested purchasers.

Janet Burnell, sales and marketing director, said: "We recognise we are in tough economic times and people who want to purchase properties may be finding it hard to sell theirs, hence introducing our part-exchange scheme here."

"We've also taken another look at our prices and reduced them to reflect the current economic climate."

"I believe these homes now offer genuinely good value – they're beautifully finished to an exceptionally high standard and in a wonderful countryside location."

The homes at Henbury Manor feature a mixture of brickwork, timber, flint and weatherboard to reflect their Kent heritage, while inside, each property is slightly different in size, design and layout to suit different family requirements.

GOOD VALUE: The Henbury Manor development

Three of the homes also come with a section of wooded area for private use.

Prices for the remaining properties at Henbury Manor range from £469,995 to £594,995.

VAUXHALL'S first Astra VXR was talented yet flawed.

It was the most powerful hot hatch on UK roads then and looked it, but I called it 'The Beast' due to wild road manners.

Attempting to put 240PS (236bhp) down on tarmac was always going to be a struggle and the VXR's steering wheel bucked in your hands, particularly in the wet, and the ride was hard, too.

Rather than a pleasure, driving was like persuading a Rottweiler to go quietly to the vet's.

So what did Vauxhall do for generation two? Make it even more powerful, of course, but this is a very different beast.

In fact, its predecessor seems to have been a watershed for the sporty VXR sub-brand. Vauxhall has since adopted a more realistic brief: the power and chassis is nice to have but not so that driver and passengers must suffer all the time.

So, the existing Insignia and Corsa VXRs are useable everyday cars with the capability to do much more when opportunity arises – the Rottweiler trots at heel until the driver decides to unleash it.

Following the same philosophy, the new Astra (£26,995) is tipped to become VXR's best-seller, despite an awesome 280PS (275bhp), making it the most powerful car in its class.

Learning from its unruly predecessor (2005-10) Vauxhall has fitted a limited slip differential to enable the Astra to apply as much power as possible without hopping from one front wheel to the other and causing the dreaded 'torque steer' for which the old car was infamous.

It's not a complete cure, but the torque steer is milder and very much at extremes of power output in a straight line.

Cornering is an enthusiast's delight, though, with the VXR wanting to oversteer or step out – predictably, mind you – like a rear-wheel-drive car, rather than run wide as a front-wheel-drive set-up should.

I'm sure it's great fun on a track, as you can also fiddle with the tautness of the suspension by selecting Sport mode or the extreme VXR setting.

But this new Astra is as much about looks as performance, definitely making the most of the stunning three-door Astra GTC design from Vauxhall/Opel's British design guru Mark Adams and his team.

Sitting on huge 19- or 20-inch alloys, wearing a smart yet discreet body kit and kicked-up rear spoiler, the VXR looks the part.

The cabin is sharp, too, with bespoke VXR sports seats and quality interior that's also surprisingly practical; with suspension on Normal mode, this road-going rocket can actually function as a family runabout.

Vauxhall sees its rivals as the VW Scirocco R and the Renault Megane Renaultsport, but the new VXR beast is the bargain, thanks to looks and generous standard kit.

Latest offering from VW gets well up on Apple's core values

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HAS the car industry gone Apple-mad?

I've written previously about Chevrolet's hybrid electric car as the 'iVolt', since the interior has the Apple touch, while Hyundai has a string of models prefixed by an 'i' – the vowel with which Apple has already wowed the world.

There are many other examples and now I've been driving a new Volkswagen Up city car (from £7,995) in the classic Apple colour – white.

For heaven's sake, it even has a cheeky grin like the Apple Macintosh start-up icon – in white it looks like a boxer wearing a gumshield.

And while the Up needs to appeal to younger buyers, its cute yet functional three- or five-door style also works for everyone else – something of an Apple trait, too.

Like Apple products, though, you do pay a bit more for the Up and its more upmarket badge; cheaper versions of virtually the same car exist as the Seat Mii and Skoda Citigo.

However, the Up is more stylish, with its distinctive kicked-up rear window frame – only on the three-door, though – smart glass tailgate... and that front-end grin.

There are also nice touches like the adjustable false floor to the boot that allows you to stack tall items like suitcases upright when it's removed or, when in place, create a flat load space level with the folded seats – by the way, the boot is impressively big for this class.

To top this, Up second-hand values should also be higher than the Skoda or Seat when you come to sell.

There's just the one engine, a willing 1.0-litre petrol unit available with outputs of 60PS (59bhp) and 75PS (74bhp), but you won't notice much difference in town traffic, since the low-down pulling power is roughly the same. Only when the 75PS stretches its legs does extra power higher up the range become evident.

So if you can't afford the dearer 75PS models

HIGH RISER:

The interior of VW's eco Up, although not luxurious, is enormous for the size of the car and offers good ride quality both for long journeys and around town

(from £10,515) you're not going to regret much, since the Up is such a fun package in basic form.

In many ways, it recalls the original 1960s Mini, with its wheel at each corner stance to maximise cabin space; it's enormous for the scale of the car, so it's no wonder that VW has promoted seeing how many people can cram into an Up, just as an earlier generation used to do with the Mini.

The driving is also Mini-esque; it corners and grips well, and while the engine is not exactly quiet, it's refined for a three-cylinder and revs well so that the little car is good fun in the cut and thrust of town traffic.

Nobody should be fazed by a long journey, either, especially with all that space and a surprisingly good ride quality.

The cabin is functional rather than luxurious and even top-spec models won't change that impression, but it's funky and well organised, with robust materials used, and blanked-off panels do not disfigure the cheaper models.

For example, if you go for sat-nav, this sits in a little pod on top of the dash.

The test car happened to be a flagship High Up with the BlueMotion Technology package that makes the car exempt from road tax – mind you, tax on other Ups is only £20 annually after the first year anyway.

Of course, there's a saving on fuel, too; the BlueMotion has an official combined cycle of 68.9mpg, while the standard 75PS engine returns 60.1mpg.

But the best buys are the cheaper 60PS models that still return 62.8mpg on the combined cycle – so, no real need to trade up for your Up.

Chevy and its space 'Cruzer'

CHEVROLET has announced typically aggressive pricing from £15,375 on its new Focus-class Cruze Station Wagon, due this autumn.

This new estate looks sharp, too, though still offers a creditable 1,478 litres of load space with rear seats folded flat.

Standard kit includes air-con, electrically-heated/adjustable mirrors, roof rails, rear and boot 12v power sockets and electronic boot release.

Fourth strong with new Clio

RENAULT has confirmed it will launch its fourth-generation Clio supermini early next year.

The latest example of the French marque's best-seller is expected to set benchmark economy levels, with weight savings of about 100 kilos against its predecessor and powertrains including Renault's first three-cylinder engine – a turbocharged 900cc unit.

A dual-clutch auto transmission makes its debut.

An upgrade for the Citroën C5

CITROËN has facelifted its stylish C5 saloon and Tourer (estate) family-size range for the first time since its launch in 2008, when it was pitched as a 'teutonically-inspired' riposte to premium German models.

Apart from cosmetics, the revised range (from £19,895) offers £700 Techno Pack upgrades on alloys, parking sensors, eMyWay satnav/audio/connectivity package, chrome window sills and front foglights.

It's time to get ready for the Dacia dust-up

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

RENAULT has started a price war with the long-awaited launch of its value-brand Dacia.

The Romanian-based range is in such demand elsewhere that Renault claims this as a key reason that it has delayed production of right-hand drive (rhd) examples for the UK.

Indeed, prospective Dacia Duster SUV-buyers must drive left-hand-drive demonstrators at dealers for now since rhd deliveries are still a few months away.

But they probably won't mind since Duster prices start at £8,995, almost half that of Renault's own nearest equivalent, the Scenic MPV at £18,335, and a huge drop from the £16,595 for the cheapest Qashqai SUV from Renault group sister brand Nissan – the Duster's closest equivalent on the UK market.

Even trading up to a 4x4 Duster model costs just £2,000 extra, while you can also extend the standard three-year/60,000-mile warranty to seven/100,000 by paying an extra £850.

It all makes you wonder just what Renault is playing at when the French brand itself has had such a trying time of late in the UK, causing it to trim its range drastically at the start of 2012 and leaving dealers to mutter that the next generation of Renault's big-selling Clio super-mini can't come soon enough. For the record, the Duster entry model is also £1,355 less than Renault's cheapest conventional car, the three-door Twin-go city car.

However, before queues form at five Renault dealers appointed to sell Dacia across Kent – Motorline at Ashford, Canterbury and Maidstone, and Lifestyle at Tonbridge and Tunbridge Wells – note that the cheapest Duster will be rather spartan and its £8,995 price-tag means rubber bumpers, steel wheels and no radio – yes, you heard right, or rather, nothing unless you pay extra.

In reality, two-thirds of buyers are expected to choose to trade up to the flagship Lauréate trim, costing from £12,995, though this is still a lot of car for the money when standard kit includes alloys, air-con, electric windows, leather-trimmed steering wheel, satin chrome roof bars, heated and electrically-adjustable door mirrors and a major cabin upgrade.

Mid-range Ambiance trim (£11,495 for front-wheel drive, £13,495 for 4x4) and upwards also gives buyers access to Renault's excellent 1.5dCi 110 diesel engine, such a hit in the Nissan Qashqai and surely suited to this cut-price sister model/rival.

Yes, you also wonder what Nissan dealers are thinking about Renault's head-office management...

Soft Top Buyer's Guide

Convert to opentop driving

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AFTER the rain we've had lately, it sounds mad to say that the UK is one of Europe's top markets for convertibles.

But maybe getting the top down is all the more important to us when the opportunity comes so rarely – and summer must arrive soon, surely?

Then there's the heritage factor: UK manufacturers were early leaders in opentop motoring with classics including the three-wheeler Morgans – soon to be revived – Triumph TRs, glorious Jaguar XKs, the E-Type and, of course, MGs.

Indeed, after the Second World War, markets all around the globe bought into the affordable British opentop-motoring phenomenon as our carmakers were driven to export and pull the country out of post-war depression.

But then the doldrums set in for wind-in-the-hair driving. As the UK car industry declined, companies felt they could not divert valuable research and development into a niche market.

Classics like the MGB were allowed to become outmoded, and the few imported convertibles tended to be equally flaky or exorbitant luxuries.

Then Mazda created the MX-5 in the late 1980s. It could have worn a Triumph or MG badge, but while those marques undoubtedly inspired it, they could not emulate its balance and reliability.

Starved of affordable croptop motoring for so long, and the engine soundtrack that often goes with it, the British public couldn't get enough MX-5s – and soon there were other players.

The MX-5 also introduced a properly weather-tight roof that could be raised or lowered in a matter of seconds.

As more convertibles entered the market, so the quality of weather and sound insulation improved. Heated-glass rear screens became the norm and many premium models also came with an electrically-raised/lowered roof.

And then Mercedes-Benz made headlines by launching the two-seat SLK roadster in 1996, featuring a folding hardtop.

Others rushed to copy the idea as many buyers realised the dream of a convertible for all seasons; one that was more secure and usually more refined than one with a softtop.

Here was a dream motor that you really could justify as your everyday or even company car.

Croptop Mercs to suit all tastes

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MERCEDES-BENZ didn't invent the folding hardtop roof – Peugeot did that in 1934 – but the German premium marque's 1996 SLK roadster popularised it.

Many imitators followed, to the point where some motoring pundits suggested that the fabric roof was doomed.

That hasn't happened and Mercedes' own extensive convertibles line-up shows there is room for both types.

Hardtops are secure but take up more boot space when folded so they are better suited to two-seaters – the roof has to span a smaller space, meaning there is less to stow.

And fabric roofs are much improved, the quality of aerodynamics, insulation and refinement being far better than they were just a few years ago.

Mercedes-Benz has also promoted lots of other aids to open-air motoring comfort such as heater ducts in head restraints to direct warm or cooling air at neck level – the so-called Aircar – and wind deflectors for 'top down mode' to stop air swirling around behind occupants to cause higher noise levels and lower temperature.

The third generation in the modern SLK series is both the most visible Mercedes-Benz convertible and the market's best-known exponent of the folding hardtop, but it is competing for headlines now with the latest in the bigger and longer-running SL series – new this year.

CHOICES: Clockwise from bottom left... big and sporty open-air star – the all-new Mercedes-Benz SL; instigator of the folding hardtop trend – the Mercedes-Benz SLK; open-air motoring in style – the Mercedes-Benz E-Class Cabriolet

The SL is at the forefront of comfortable open-air sports-car motoring, although it's not the brand's most prestigious model in this exclusive sector; the roadster version of the SLS supercar has that honour.

In contrast with these sporting open-air models, Mercedes-Benz also offers the elegant and comfortable four-seat E-Class Cabriolet – a luxurious way for the family to enjoy convertible motoring.

IF PAYING ROAD TAX MAKES YOU HIT THE ROOF, HELLO.

No roof and no road tax*. Welcome to the car that has everything. The TwinAir engine has super low emissions, and it's a hoot to drive because it gives you more torque at lower revs. So as well as helping you keep your temper, driving the Fiat 500C with TwinAir also preserves your sense of fun.

Sporting Boxster hits the heights

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MANY opentop sports cars or roadsters are created from coupe models, but Porsche decided to build the Boxster from the the ground up.

This made the bodywork extremely rigid, even under extreme handling, and with its mid-mounted engine the Boxster became an instant classic.

A third-generation model has now just been launched to great acclaim.

As with its 911 supercar big brother – also pictured here in opentop Cabriolet form – Porsche has ensured that the new Boxster is derived visually from its predecessors.

Even so, it looks wider, lower and more aggressive than before and now has a fully electric hood that opens to reveal a distinctive and typically stylish Porsche interior, with more space and a centre console inspired by the German marque's Carrera GT supercar.

With more powerful engines and weight-savings of up to 35 kilos, the newcomer is also the most agile yet.

Porsche also says that the latest Boxster S flagship has lapped the testing German Nürburgring-Nordschleife race circuit in 7:58 minutes – lopping 12 seconds off the time clocked by its predecessor.

CHOICES: The Boxster (top) was built from scratch; however, big brother the Porsche 911 also comes in soft-top format

Fiat's retro retractable roof's a star

IN keeping with the UK's status as a major open-top market, Fiat offered its 500C convertible for sale here before anywhere else in the world – including its Italian home market.

As its hatchback parent model does to the 1950s 500 Nuevo model, the 500C pays homage to the original 1957 fabric-roof version.

However, it is 50 years ahead for refinement and convenience. Aerodynamic research means turbulence with the roof open has been reduced to a minimum, while an electric sliding roof makes the 500C a year-round proposition.

It also has an exclusive feel to its interior, embellished with top-quality desirable fabrics and optional Frau leather upholstery, and a long list of standard and optional features from automatic climate control to innovative Interscope hi-fi, and the Blue&Me Map portable navigation unit.

There is also plenty of powertrain choice, including a 1.3-litre diesel for the ultimate in economy driving, but the smart choice is the low emission 0.9-litre TwinAir petrol unit.

COOL: Customisation and special editions have made the 500C a must-have fashion accessory

FOOTBALL

The rolling Stones come back home in style after rising from the ashes

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

IT has taken 24 years, and in doing so skipped generations of supporters, but finally, this weekend, Maidstone United are back playing in their own town with a sell-out pre-season friendly against Brighton.

The club went from the dizzy heights of playing in front of thousands in the Football League in the early 90s to oblivion, entertaining a handful of hardcore supporters on park pitches.

But after fighting its way back up the leagues on a firmer financial footing it has managed to build a new £2.6m stadium of its own.

It puts an end to the two decades of ground-sharing with Dartford, Ashford and Sittingbourne which meant fans had not seen a 'home' game in the town for nearly a quarter of a century, and on occasions have had to travel less distance to away games.

"It's been an absolute rollercoaster," said club secretary Darren Lovell. "There have been a few dark times. We went from the Football League to a Sunday youth team.

"It was phenomenal going from watching them at Burnley's Turf Moor in front of 11,000 to a game against Scott Sports reserves. With the greatest respect, who are they?

"We were a little bit of a strange thing; we had supporters following a Sunday league team.

"I've had away games that are closer to where we've played at home, and we've got generations of supporters we've lost that have never seen them play in Maidstone - it's a significant thing."

The club's Football League decline has been well documented over the years; held up as an example of how it over-stretched and the high cost of a string of poor business decisions.

The year before they finally clinched promotion into the league they had sold their London Road ground to MFI for a new superstore.

They moved to Dartford where they shared

COMPLETION: Maidstone's Gallagher Stadium has had the final touches put in place this week the non-league club's Watling Street stadium.

But having over spent to reach the promised land the financial pressures became too much.

An attempt to move back to Maidstone saw the club splash out £400,000 on a site in Hollingbourne - only to be denied permission to develop it by the local council. The writing was on the wall. Just two weeks into the 1992/93 season they collapsed into liquidation and resigned from the league.

The club was dissolved but would rise from the ashes later that year as Maidstone Invicta. However, the road back to glory would be a long and hard one, starting at the very bottom of the Kent football pyramid.

It was too much for Lovell who had previously travelled around the country to watch them.

"We were reduced to playing on school pitches; I couldn't watch park football," he said. "We always had a laugh and a joke, but for me it was very difficult, my club had died.

"The support base went from 5,000, a really good support base, to a handful of hardcore supporters of about three figures. At its lowest it was 30 at the most. There was only so much you could take.

"I went away got married and had children, I didn't watch a game for years."

Slowly but surely, however, they rose up the ranks, emerging into the Kent League and then winning promotion into the Ryman League.

They certainly won't be playing on a park pitch again.

Their new 3G astroturf surface is state-of-the-art. It's the same kind used in Moscow's Luzhniki Stadium which hosted World Cup qualifiers including Russia vs England and Champions League ties involving Premier League clubs Arsenal and Tottenham Hotspur. So it would have to take some stormy weather to stop the Stones getting out on pitch.

Commercially, too, it has agreed some substantial deals including a £150,000 five-year stadium naming rights deal with the Gallagher Group and a shirt sponsorship deal with Britelite. Now the club is hoping to utilise its playing surface throughout the week and not rely on gate receipts to keep them afloat.

The stadium includes function rooms and a bar to hire out for extra revenue too.

The club is hoping to average just over half of its 2,000 capacity through the season, with the main attraction a 400-seater stand.

"Last year, we averaged 355, which apart from Bognor Regis, was the biggest average in the league," Lovell reflects. "Dartford's first game in their new stadium was at home to Horsham YMCA and was a 4,100 sellout.

"We can't get 4,000 in here, but we are expecting to go the right way to increase the number of supporters, with a regular 1,100 throughout the season."

Lovell said the club wouldn't be where it was today without the army of volunteers who have given up their time to drag it back to life, as well as the clubs who have hosted them.

He said: "I would like to put on record my thanks, without them we wouldn't be here today, it's kept us alive, that needs public acknowledgement."

Schofield reunited again with Martin Allen as double act look to plot Gills' return to promotion success

GILLINGHAM'S new assistant manager John Schofield is hoping to play his part in taking the club to the next level.

The 47-year-old has linked up with new boss Martin Allen for the second time in his career.

The pair worked together at Cheltenham Town in 2009 where he worked as Allen's assistant.

It was a whirlwind start for the man who spent the majority of his playing days at Lincoln where he made 231 appearances in six years in the early 1990s.

He made a mad dash down from his home in Lincoln to put together a training programme last Thursday.

"I took a call on the Wednesday from the gaffer saying he'd got the job and would I be interested in speaking to him? He said we are starting in the morning, normal time," he said.

"I was up at three in the morning and here at 6am to do a training programme, I met the chairman at 10.30am, then met the players at 2.30pm and it was 8pm, or 9pm that night that we finished. It's been full on."

He took training sessions over the weekend which included a swimming session at the Strand Leisure Pool, before joining the rest of the squad on an excursion to Le Touquet in the north of France for a four-day training trip, from which they will return on Tuesday.

He is hoping they can build on the foundations laid by former boss Andy Hessenthaler.

"It's about making a difference and pushing the club forward, that's what we are aiming to achieve," he said. "We have been getting to know the players, making sure we get our philosophy into them right for pre-season.

"The training ground is good, and facilities around the place are lovely. Now we want to move it forward again."

But before the season starts there is plenty of hard work to get through: "It's about injury prevention, aerobic levels, and getting the maximum out of the players.

"As an assistant, your role is to support the manager with discussions and communications. You work together to formulate a game plan, you spend the early part of the week drip feeding the players that information.

"I'll be organising the coaching and fitness levels, working with Patto (Mark Patterson) and the development group to make sure they're continually progressing."

Another new member of the backroom staff is strength and conditioning coach James Russell who is a former pupil at St John Fisher School in Chatham. He worked with Allen at Notts County.

Youth team physio James Barker has been promoted to look after first team affairs, replacing Steve Allen who joined the club in 2010 when Andy Hessenthaler became boss.

Byrne looking to find form at the 'world's best track'

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

SHANE Byrne is looking forward to returning to home soil next week as the British Superbike Championship heads to Brands Hatch.

With the championships at the half-way stage the pressure is mounting on riders to get themselves into a position where they can challenge in the top six in the showdown series.

Byrne is on course to achieve that after picking up two seconds and a third at Oulton Park last week. He has also shown great form at Brands in the last few years.

In the 2011 season he finished with six podiums from eight races, while in the other two he finished 16th and 6th. He is currently second in the podium credits table with 17 points, seven behind Tommy Hill, while in the overall standings he is third with 209 points, 29 behind Hill, and one behind Josh Brookes who is second.

He said: "Brands is like home. I cycle up there regularly just to say hello to all the guys and girls.

"I really love the long circuits, it's probably one of my favourite circuits in the world, I really look forward to riding there. It's the first track I ever raced on and won on. It's like an amphitheatre, everybody can watch."

He is hoping to learn from mistakes made last season when he admits it took too long to get to grips with new parts on his machine in the crucial showdown rides.

"It's getting to a fairly crucial part of the season where you can make it through to the show-

IMPROVEMENT: Shane Byrne knows he has work to do despite picking up three podiums at Oulton down which is the be all and end all," he said. "It's important to rack up the podium credits and get ourselves in a position where when we get to the showdown races we have a chance to fight for every race.

"Last year going into the showdowns we starting adding new parts to the bike and it took a while to figure it out."

Despite last week's podiums he knows he has more work to do.

"Last weekend we had two seconds and a third, some people would say that's fantastic, but for me it's a pretty bitter pill to swallow," he said. "It means I have got more work to do."

Birchall back in the fold after a year out with knee injury

ADAM Birchall has praised his team mates for helping him come through his injury nightmare.

Big things were expected of the 27-year-old when he signed from Dover last summer where he scored 68 goals in 74 games in two seasons, but his career at Priestfield never started. He broke down with a knee injury on July 14 in a pre-season game against Welling United and has been on a long road to recovery.

It was just three months ago that he finally kicked a ball again without any pain, and is fully involved in pre-season training again although he isn't flying into any tackles just yet.

He said: "It was a massive test of how much I wanted it and my professionalism, my character, but everyone has got around me, the fans, the chairman and the boys in the dressing room. I'm back at the point where I'm nearly playing again and I just can't wait."

He said any thoughts of it happening again quickly disappear once he's out on the pitch.

"When you're on the pitch and you're playing you switch on and you're in the zone, you forget about it," he said. "I have been reined in when I needed to be tough."

He insists he is feeling no pressure other than what he places on himself.

"Expectations are my own, as a pro I've played for a long time now, you know what's expected of you," he said. "My level, no matter what someone thinks I should be doing, is ten times higher."

"The more pressure you have shows you're achieving something and going further in your life, and I love that."

ATHLETICS

Golden Gemili now firmly among the running elite

ADAM Gemili set a host of new records when he became the World Junior Champion in Barcelona this week.

The 18-year-old ran a new PB time of 10.05s, which is a new championship record, and a new British Junior record beating the previous best of 10.06s set by Dwain Chambers 15 years ago.

The Blackheath and Bromley athlete blitzed his opposition in the final on Wednesday night with the USA's Aaron Ernest finishing second in 10.17s, while Odean Skeen of Jamaica completed the podium with 10.28s.

He sprang onto the Olympic radar in Germany in June when he became the fastest Brit this year with a 10.08s run which earned him his place in Team GB.

When being interviewed trackside after the race he said: "I just told myself to stay relaxed and stay focused."

"I am not going to lie, I was nervous before the race; it's a World Junior final, it's in this stadium in Barcelona, how can you not be nervous? But you need to use your nerves in a good way, try to use them to help you run and I did it.

"This is a massive stepping stone for the Olympics. If I had only made the final it would have been a great achievement, to win makes it huge."

"I am feeling good and I am running well, I just feel there is a whole lot more to come."

PATIENT: Adam Riley waiting for chance to side

Riley happy to wait for chance to shine while learning from master

KENT youngster Adam Riley is happy to bide his time for a first team place as he continues to learn from England ace James Tredwell

Riley made his debut in the first team last season and has since appeared fleetingly in the one day sides in the absence of Tredwell.

Tredwell's success for England is doubly pleasing for Riley, as while he's pleased that his team mate is representing his country, it also gives him a chance to sneak into the first team for a game or two.

"It's a case of being patient and waiting for opportunities; with Treddy doing well and getting called up for England it opens the door for me," he said.

"He knows I'm open to listening. He's very good with the younger players and with me, he's great to feed off."

"I wouldn't be ready for the cricket he's been playing, but when he goes to England it gives me a chance to step in for the twenty20s."

The 20-year-old played for the first team in the t20 at the Kia Oval against Surrey, taking two wickets, and became a hot topic on the social networking site Twitter.

He said: "I played the Surrey game on Sky and I took a couple of wickets. Once the game was finished Keysey (captain Rob Key) had his phone out and said I was trending on Twitter."

"There were three things trending, bananas, DNA and Adam Riley, there must have been a few sados online at that stage. I can't imagine I'll ever trend on Twitter again."

He is one of a number of young players making their mark in the first team with Sam Northeast, Adam Ball, Adam Blake all staking a claim for a regular slot.

And while Riley feels the club was criticised for bloodthirsty last year, it has worked out for the best.

"There was a lot last year with supporters saying 'we've thrown the youngsters in' and 'was it worth it?', but it's good because we've been exposed and come back stronger," he said.

"Last year we didn't have the competition for places. This year we've got strength in depth."

Kent get back to CB40 action on Monday when they play Sussex Sharks at Arundel and they resume their league campaign when bottom side Glamorgan visit Canterbury on Thursday.
